The Turning-Point

THE ALDERMEN ELECTED TO guard the interests of Victoria have secured an excellent "compromise" from Mr. J. S. Reid, the Vancouver developer with the Wharf Street property. Instead of three high-rise towers — one of 25 storeys and two of 19 storeys — they have cleverly forced Mr. Reid to agree to build two towers — one 26 storeys high and the other 23. In this way the city council has prevented congestion of people and traffic on Wharf Street and preserved Victoria's fine view of the Sooke Hills and sunsets.

The bargain sounds so incredible it is difficult to believe. And Mr. Reid himself issued a prophecy of the now almost inevitable results for the future with his remark at the conclusion of yesterday's meeting: "I think high-rises should be encouraged there . . . I say it is very desirable because you can see through it".

The gate is now wide open. With two of the highest buildings in town pushing into the air opposite Bastion Sqare the way will be cleared for a row of them down the shore to Johnson Street Bridge and beyond. For Council has now accepted the principle that downtown Victoria is to have a high-rise look, just like every other city on the continent that has neither the courage nor the imagination to preserve a different character.

The lack of an over-all plan for the city has led to this situation. There has been no effort to plan a cityscape that would preserve the best of old Victoria and marry it to what would be the most appropriate of new developments. There has been no effective assessment of what the new high-rises will do to Victoria, quite apart from walling the city off from the sea that is its greatest natural asset. Nobody has proved that we need them.

High-rises normally try to monopolize public parksides or public watersides, so as to gain the best for the tenants at the expense of the community behind the buildings. Has Council sat down to consider the costs that will soon have to be faced in rerouting high-rise traffic from overburdened waterfront streets — the lesson that every city which has over-built has had to learn? Has it worked out what a walled-in waterfront will cost the inhabitants and businesses on the landward side of the wall?

A major error in judgment has been made, no matter how many immediate dollars the high-rise may appear to add to the city's tax revenues. You can't really blame Mr. Reid, of course. He's a businessman and promoter. He just brought his show into the village and the village elders bought it.

Hang-up in the Sky

LUFTHANSA'S REJECTION OF the package deal sought by other members of the International Air Transport Association to lower transatlantic fares cannot permanently prevent a cut in the cost to the passenger for flights from this country to London and return. The companies seeking the reduction are not moved by philanthropy. They have to bring charges down to meet the competition of charter flights which so ate into revenue last year that a number of major lines operated in the red.

Under these circumstances, the comment of Mr. Yves Pratte, chairman of the board of Air Canada and the airline's chief executive officer, presents a clear picture of things to come. He forecasts a move to adopt the lower fares listed in the proposed package deal, with or without German agreement. Spokesmen for other airlines, notably BOAC, agree with him. They want a fare structure that will enable them to win some of the low-cost traffic now going by charter, expecting to make up through volume more than is dropped by cutting the price of tickets.

The reduction of charges would win wide approval from the travelling public interested primarily in moving from one destination to another in safety and at an economical fare. That is the formula which has brought success to so many excellent charter flights.

While the issue remains undecided during the pre-September period allowed Lufthansa to reconsider its position, attention might also be given by Air Canada to the question of low fares to and from London for traffic originating either in Victoria or Vancouver. The minimum suggested during this week's discussions for the Montreal-London return flight, plus present excursion flight costs from Victoria or Vancouver to Montreal and back, would still make the total appreciably higher than the average charter flight from the Pacific Coast to the British capital.

If Air Canada and others hope to claim a substantial share of the payloads now carried on group flights, their competitive price cannot remain higher than that of a comfortable charter.

IATA fare agreements were created to protect the airlines from costly internal price wars. But the protection itself has become a handicap in the face of popular charter competition. The IATA is now confronted by the necessity of adapting to meet the new situation or risking a break-up of the global organization. The public will no longer suffer needlessly high costs imposed by an international group. And the airlines are beginning to realize it.

The Teacher Market

COMMENTING ON THE PROSpects of teaching positions in elementary and secondary schools in this decade, Mr. A. W. Cowan of the federal department of Manpower and Immigration, who has published a study on the subject, remarks: "It seems clear that individuals seeking to enter the teaching profession in the 1970s can expect to encounter highly competitive conditions. In this situation, the specialist will have the advantage, generally speaking, and there will be more opportunities at the secondary than at the elementary level." Specialties which were in demand last year included French, art, music, special education and physical education.

The principal cause of the oversupply of teachers is the decline in the birth rate over the last 15 years and the economics of the profession which is keeping the teacher-pupil ratio stable. Mr. Cowan presumably is in a position to know the situation. His words could save prospective teachers future frustration and unemployment.

A Little Censorship

AT A RECENT SOVIET Writers' gathering the poet Yevgeny Yevtushenko told his fellow writers, among other things, that "We are the children of the 20th Congress that denounced the cult of personality . . ." When his speech was published in an offical journal the phrase was rewritten: "We are the children of party decisions . . ."

The official rendering of the phrase into something innocuous suggests not only that references to the 1956 party Congress that denounced Stalinism are reserved for spokesmen of the Politburo, but also that the "cult of personality" is not altogether out of fashion. The options for maintaining party rule are being kept open, dissidents to the contrary.

Compromise on One Side Only

Ottawa Citizen

No one will quarrel with Premier Bourassa's statement at Victoria that separatism as a political force would die if Quebec were assured of maintaining its distinct identity within Confederation. But the means Mr. Bourassa proposes remain open to question.

He insists on making French the language of work in Quebec, and demands total control of social welfare. It is up to Quebec and to the large corporations, which are now moving toward the first goal, to attain it. But the second must depend on compromise, for Quebec's interests and Ottawa's conflict.

Thus far, Quebec expects all the compromises to be made by Ottawa. Indeed, it has insisted on complete surrender of the federal position. Behind the rhetoric about provincial rights lies the demand that Quebec decide the kind and amount of its welfare program, with Ottawa merely helping with the financing — presumably with money obtained from the "have" provinces of Ontario, British Columbia and Alberta.

Small wonder that some of the provinces as well as Ottawa have resisted. Quebec's insistence has nothing to do with securing the survival of the French culture. It has to do with power.

THE COSTS COME HIGH

When Mother Nature Says 'Burn, Baby, Burn'

By ART STOTT

THE brown patches on the lawn that parched quickly last month tell the story of British Columbia's fast-ballooning fire hazard in the woods this summer, says W. C. "Cy" Phillips, forester in charge of suppression for the province. June's sustained rains promoted lush but shallow-rooted grass growth. When July's heat wave struck, the land dried out, the grass cured and died early. In the wildlands it and weeds became the tinder waiting a spark. Nature, in an excessive pattern of violence, supplied the spark — lightning.

Stott

So far this season about 60 per cent of the reported fires have been attributed to that cause against a normal yearly average of 40 per cent.

This is the current situation as the suppression crews assume responsibility for an ever-increasing area of the province. Twenty years ago, the Forest Service concerned itself almost entirely with fire in the southern half of British Columbia. North of Prince George outbreaks were usually allowed to burn themselves out. The country was remote, access difficult and the capability of the suppression forces to reach the scene quickly with equipment to catch a fire before it spread was strictly limited.

Then came northern development. Expendable timber became valuable as the swing to the pulp economy pushed up from Prince George. What previously could be ignored required protection.

The difficulties have not been removed entirely by intensive use of aircraft and mechanical equipment. The Tee fire north of Liard Hot Springs on the Alaska highway has already this summer burned over an acreage equivalent to more than the annual total British Columbia burn during the last three years. Black spruce, of minimal commercial value, has been destroyed.

A Continuing Problem

The growing importance of northern timber emphasizes a continuing problem in suppression: Which fires should be attacked and contained — if possible — which should be allowed to run without serious threat to the provincial economy or the safety of people? Decision is up to the district forester, and decision is demanded almost instantaneously.

Some fires are beneficial. A stand of dead, decayed or infested trees, is better burned than left. The burn permits development of a new, healthier forest. But, points out Mr. Phillips, it takes nature close to a century to re-establish sturdy, useful growth, and there is little assurance that a fire left to burn will contain itself without endangering adjacent valuable stands. The district forester, making his quick decision, has to take in practical, economic and ecological considerations.

He can't afford to commit men and equipment to a fire with no hope of suppressing it. He is on doubtful ground when, since fighting frequently costs as much as a good stand is worth, he decides to protect something of little economic or public value. But he also must consider the ecological transformation fire may bring.

The last point is underscored by research in the Chilcotin. Before the arrival of white men, that area was burned over and fine fir forests were destroyed. Now only pockets of good timber are left there. The land is open for grazing and there is lots of grass. It is not, however, the Chilcotin of an earlier period.

In the fulness of time, fire would work, as it has done from the earliest days, as a natural process in cleaning up land and leading to regeneration. But as long as British Columbia depends on forest products as the basis of its economy, it can't afford the time. It cannot permit a break in the age category of trees which at present permits a sustained allowable cut.

Fire-Fighting Costs

Costs of fighting fires are rising, partly because of inflation, partly because of more expensive use of equipment (one bulldozer can be more effective than 100 men) and because manpower costs are also higher. Casual fire-fighters now receive $1.75 an hour and board, against a rate of 35 cents an hour in the '30s.

This season, the average cost of fighting a fire is about the same as that last year. Approximately $4.472 millions had been spent to the end of this week on about 1,900 outbreaks. The totals are lower than 1970, when expenses reached a record high.

Industry, because trees are its bread and butter, is good in bringing equipment and men into action to fight fires, though progress has created an anomaly here. Modern logging is automated. The old bull of the woods logger is being replaced by the operator of a machine. There are more mechanical operators, fewer Paul Bunyans.

No Improvement Likely

The situation is not likely to improve, either in cost or fire incidence. A more cautious, better informed public, including the nature boys of the back-to-the-land movement, may avoid causing outbreaks, but more people in the wilds pose added hazards. Furthermore, a cyclical weather pattern indicates more frequent bad fire years than at an earlier time — a development some ecologists blame on human pollution of the atmosphere to which is attributed hotter, more frequent summer dry spells. And the use of expensive equipment will continue. Where the service introduced experimental airtankers about a decade ago, along with a helicopter or two, it now has 14 tankers under contract and 24 helicopters. They pay off in getting into the battle quickly, before fire spreads. But they come high.

Audrey Johnson's lack of knowledge on the subject of theatre and her lay opinion of plays that she has seen are tolerable. However, such diatribes as her recent article on Ralph Allen and the Victoria Fair Theatre must not go unchallenged.

What experience qualifies her to pontificate on repertories, production standards and financial managements of theatre companies here and elsewhere? Has she ever worked in or studied the theatre of Stratford and New York? Indeed, has she ever seen plays in either location? How does she have the nerve to compare Victoria Fair and a small repertory budget with the enormous Stratford operaton? Working for a newspaper should not give one the automatic right to expound at will on subjects that they apparently know nothing about.

Ralph Allen has been largely responsible for the steady growth of Victoria Fair Theatre in each of its three seasons. Audiences decide a theatre's quality. I urge the people of Victoria to come and see Justice, Not Revenge; Room Service and A Trip Abroad and judge for themselves. — Harvey M. Miller, 3539 Richmond Road.

With Disgust

It was with a feeling of disgust that I read Sounding Board by Mrs. Audrey Johnson on Saturday, August 7, 1971.

It is no secret that Mrs. Johnson has been engaged, over the past several months, in a personal disagreement with Dr. Ralph Allen, director of Victoria Fair Theatre. Her dislike of Dr. Allen, however childish, is of course her own business; but when this dislike seriously prejudices her objectivity as a drama critic and a journalist, then it becomes the business of us all.

Prior to her disagreement with Dr. Allen, Mrs. Johnson had, in the main, nothing but praise for the Victoria Fair Theatre Company. In order to justify this statement, let me quote one sentence from each of her reviews of the seven plays, produced by this same company, prior to this year:

Measure for Measure: "If what occurred Thursday night at the Phoenix Theatre is an indication of what we may expect from the University of Victoria theatre division from this point, some of the most exciting theatre in Canada may soon be happening on our doorstep."

Tartuffe: "Long, long and often may they reign there, for this is just the kind of beautiful and essentially professional performance that the McPherson has been awaiting since its opening."

Hamlet: "From the magnificent broodingly Gothic, eminently actable set by Robert Cothran to the close ensemble performance of the company, there is much to admire."

The Merchant of Venice: "It is also a 'must-see' . . . if brilliant stage craft fascinates you or if you are hungry for some fine polished acting in a total concept worthy of the term 'professional theatre'."

Androcles and the Lion: "This bubbling, buoyant joke, clear, crisp and beautifully paced, throughout its brief length . . . is perfect for the family, perfect for a summer evening and a very definite 'don't miss'."

And then Mrs. Johnson had a disagreement with Dr. Allen and on Saturday, August 7, 1971, she said:

"At best the Victoria Fair acting company is competent; at worst, mediocre. Nowhere is it brilliant. And to describe it as versatile is pure hyperbole."

Mrs. Johnson's complete change of attitude, coming when it did, suggests that she is displaying the epitome of small-town journalism. — (Mrs.) Penelope S. Devlin, No. 3, 1462 Rockland Ave.

The Arrangements Completed

Recently I had my engagement announcement printed in your papers and was somewhat annoyed at some unexpected results. These specifically were several advertising pieces of mail and offers of good bargains on flowers, baked goods and special wedding music. I just wanted a chance to say that not only do I disapprove of such a practice of getting business from information in engagement announcements, but these announcements are put in usually three weeks prior to the wedding and all plans and arrangements are finalized at this point. In discussing this with friends I find I am not the only one to receive such special offers.

I realize that the papers are not responsible for such and can do nothing to prevent it, but maybe someone will read this letter and know that it is not appreciated. — Miss Helen Walters, 83 Sims.

The Ulster Scots

The people of Northern Ireland are Lowland Scots Presbyterians, as different as possible in race, religion and language to the Irish.

They were planted in Northern Ireland by the English government to help maintain the domination of the Protestant religion and the British power over Ireland.

For more than 300 years they have been loyal and steadfast in these objects. The ideas of the British government, the British people and the world in general on these subjects have changed. Those of the people of Northern Ireland have not. Therein lies the difficulty.

The people of Northern Ireland belive that if the worst came and they were abandoned by the British government, that with the help of God (whose power is irresistible) they could still conquer the Irish and reimpose the dominance of the Protestant religion and of the British Sovereign in Ireland. — J. P. Thornton, 943 Wilmer.

Czech Invasion Anniversary

The invasion of Prague, capital of Czechoslovakia by Soviet and Warsaw Pact Armies on August 21, 1968, assured Moscow of a continued flow of strategic military supplies to be used in Vietnam and Egypt. Soldiers and their families are depriving the Czechs of needed living quarters and food. Slow death by unremitting reprisals, loss of positions, jobs and now, again, the added terror of being taken to concentration camp are continuing.

Technicians and professionals are forced to serve Moscow in different parts of the world while their families are mere hostages. More concentration camps are almost ready. There were 56 camps and 94,000 prisoners (prior to 1968) forced to build military installations and other projects. With stolen property and slave labor, Russia is doing well!

Are we to become their slaves also? Are we to keep on aiding the criminals?

The Warsaw Pact armies are to conduct manoeuvres. Are they again going to destroy crops? Why should NATO forces be reduced when it is clear that Moscow continues to increase her military power at the expense of her captive nations, and us? — Bessie S. Henry, 1306 Johnson.

Rhyming Thanks

On July 15, 1971, my husband and I were in Victoria, B.C., and while there I wrote the following:

Of a Heavenly Place.

The above is the feeling Victoria gave me. This is given to Victoria as my way of saying "Thanks" for a lovely visit. Esther B. Ostroff, 291 Capistrano Ave., San Francisco.

60 Years Ago

From the Times of August 13, 1911:

Politeness, honesty and hustle are the three prime requisites of the successful newsboy. So says "Noodles" Fagan, the famous newsboy, guest of the Daily Times, who appears at the Empress theatre this week in a clean-cut vaudeville act. To this advice he adds the injunctions, "Don't miss one school session, don't drink, don't chew, keep your hands clean, keep your character clean."

Late Putting Woes, But Bert's on Top

OAKFIELD, N.S. (CP) — Bert Ticehurst, although not pleased with his second-round performance, holds a two-stroke lead with two rounds remaining in the Canadian amateur golf championship.

"I'm a little unhappy," the 41-year-old Vancouver golfer said Thursday after shooting a one-over-par 74 to give him a 36-hole total of 145 and the lead over four golfers tied at 147.

". . . Too many three putts," he said after three-putting three of the last four greens.

Ticehurst handled the par 36 front nine in regulation but he nearly missed on the par four ninth.

A member of the Willington Cup winning British Columbia team, Ticehurst shanked his approach shot on to the adjoining first fairway. It took a chip shot past a clump of trees and a downhill 25-foot putt to salvage his par.

John Sale of Calais, Me. had a good opportunity for a share of the lead. He shot a two-under 71 and finished tied with Dick Siderowf of Easton, Conn., Jimmy Wittenberg of Memphis, Tenn., and Andre Gagne of Boischatel, Que., at 147.

HAD BAD 18TH

Going into the final hole, Sale was four strokes under par. A disastrous effort on the 18th green added two strokes to his game.

He put his tee shot on the 18th just in front of a small tree near the centre of the fairway. The tree obstructed his swing and the approach shot went to the back of the green, some 80 feet from the pin.

Sale was short on the first putt. The second also failed.

Tom Henry of Peterborough, Ont., George Haines of Bernardsvill, N.J., and Michael Sanger of Greenwich, Conn., all had 148 counts. Henry and Sanger both hot second round 74s while Haines had a 75.

The field was cut to the top 60 and ties after the second round, leaving 65 golfers with scores of 58 or less in contention for the Earl Grey Cup.

MICK MISSES CUT

Among those who failed to make the cut was Dave Mick, the Victoria youngster who registered a four-under-par 142 in leading British Columbia to victory Monday and Tuesday in the 36-hole Willingdon Cup team competition. Mick again ran into trouble Thursday, adding an 83 to his first-round 82 for a total of 165.

Interesting Things Happen Behind the Soaring Birds

By The Associated Press

Baltimore Orioles, leading the American League's East Division by a comfortable eight games, might be tempted to take a peek over their shoulders. There are interesting things going on back there.

For example, Detroit's Mickey Lolich, hidden by the Vida Blue excitement all season, is on the threshold of 20 victories for the Tigers.

New York Yankees are enjoying the best record in the division since the all-star break with a 19-11 log that has them two games over .500 for the first time all year.

But the Orioles, unconcerned by the shenanigans behind them, whipped Minnesota Twins 8-2 Thursday night to maintain their AL East lead. Detroit took over second place with a 4-3 decision over Milwaukee Brewers—Lolich's 19th victory of the season. The Yankees made it eight victories in the last 10 games by sweeping a doubleheader from California Angeles 3-0 and 2-1 with the second game going 11 innings.

In other AL action, Oakland Athletics walloped Boston Red Sox 6-2 and Kansas City Royals split a doubleheader at Washington, winning the first game 2-0 but dropping the nightcap 2-1.

SWEEP SERIES

The Orioles jumped on Minnesota's Jim Kaat for three runs before a man was retired in the first inning and coasted over the Twins for a sweep of their three-game series.

Lolich pitched a six-hitter and the Tigers broke a tie in the eighth inning with Bill Freehan's triple the big blow to beat Milwaukee. The victory was the Tigers' 13th in the last 17 games and left Lolich with a 19-8 record.

Mike Kekich limited California to four hits in 11 innings and Bobby Murcer's two-out, two-strike single drove in New York' winning run in the second game of the doubleheader.

Bert Campaneris ripped three singles, driving in two runs and scoring two as Oakland whacked Boston, completing a sweep of their series and tumbling the Red Sox to third place in the East.

San Francisco Giants, who have had a hard time beating anyone recently, took a day off and let Los Angeles Dodgers beat themselves for a change.

It was a lift for their spirits, to say nothing of their lead in the National League West.

While the Giants didn't play, they improved their lead to four games over Los Angeles when the Dodgers fumbled over a 3-1, 13-inning loss to Philadelphia Phillies Thursday night.

The Los Angeles' loss was good news to San Francisco, which had lost eight of 10 games and wasted most of a 10-game lead to the hot Dodgers.

Only three other games were played in the National League Thursday night as Atlanta Braves crushed Houston Astros 10-5, St. Louis Cardinals nipped Pittsburgh Pirates 3-2 and San Diego Padres turned back New York Mets 3-0.

Marlene Gains One-Shot Lead

WEST VANCOUVER (CP) — A one-under-par 73 gave Marlene Streit a one-stroke lead over her two nearest competitors for the Canadian women's amateur golf championship as play entered the third of four rounds today.

Mrs. Streit, from Forthill, Ont., parred each of the first nine holes Thursday, then broke par on the back nine with an eagle on the 15th for a two-round total of 149 on the 6,119-yard Capilano course.

Jo Ann Washam of Auburn, Wash., and Jocelyne Bourassa of Shawinigan, Que., were second with 150.

British Columbia scored a team total of 459 to take the interprovincial team championship phase of the tournament, one stroke ahead of Ontario. Alberta was third with 478 in the 36-hole tournament.

Mrs. Streit has won the women's title nine times.

ALSO BROKE PAR

Also in contention for the title were Cheran Gerber of South Africa and Gail Moore of Vancouver, both with 152.

Miss Gerber was the only other golfer besides Mrs. Streit to break par in the tournament to date. She shot 39 on the front nine and chipped in on the 10th for an eagle three to return in a one-under-par 36.

Mrs. Moore, defending national champion, had 76 on both her first two rounds.

Toronto's Liz Daniel lost her first-round lead with a 78 Thursday for two-round 153. Gayle Borthwick also had 153.

Two other Victorians qualified for today's final round. Shirley Naysmith fired an 84 Thursday for 173 and Jeannie Hopps posted an 85 for 171. Missing the cut was Nita Moody of Victoria, with a tally of 188.

Winless Schlee Starts With Six-Under-Par 66

SUTTON, Mass. (AP) — John Schlee, winless in five years on the professional golf tour, nursed a slim lead today entering the second round of the $165,000 Massachusetts Classic.

Schlee, 32, fashioned a six-under-par 34-32—66 Thursday in the first round of the 72-hole tournament at 7,212-yard Pleasant Valley Country Club.

Schlee had seven birdies and went one over par once in launching a bid for his first tour victory. The Professional Golfers Association Rookie of the Year in 1966, his best showing was a second-place finish in the St. Paul Open that season.

Schlee moved into a one-stroke lead over Tom Weiskopf, the Kemper Open champion who had a 34-33—67 in the morning before the rain-soaked layout dried under a hot sun.

DeWitt Weaver was alone with 68, but Bobby Mitchell, Lou Graham, Joel Goldstrand, Rod Funseth, Bert Weaver and Ray Floyd were just another stroke back at 69.

McLarens Beaten By Oshawa Gaels

NEW WESTMINSTER — B.C. champion McLaren Construction of Saanich took its second loss in as many starts here Thursday in the Canadian invitational peewee lacrosse tournament, bowing 11-1 to Oshawa Green Gaels in the "A" division. Saanich lost, 12-8, to Long Branch, Ontario, in a Wednesday game in the 28-team, two-section tournament.

Tuneup Clash For Playoffs

Victoria McDonald's Bread Junior "B" lacrosse team defeated its namesake in the intermediate class, 22-9, in an exhibition game at Memorial Arena Thursday night.

The contest was played in preparation for upcoming B.C. playoff games for both clubs.

Pitcher's Double Cracks Deadlock

Wade Burns pitched a four-hitter and drove in the winning run Thursday in Langford Drywall's 6-5 victory over Centry Inn in the first game of the best-of-five Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League semi-final series at Heywood Avenue Park.

Sparked by Cec Ferguson's two-run homer, Langford took a 4-0 lead in the second inning, but Century's Don Frampton struck back with another two-run homer in the fourth frame. A three-run outburst by the innkeepers in the sixth tied the score.

The victory gave Langford a 1-0 series lead. Bell's Men's Wear and Colwood Inn meet tonight for the first game of the other semi-final at Heywood.

Macs Tackle Bellies

Victoria McDonald's Bread will meet New Westminster Salmonbellies here at Memorial Arena Sunday in the first contest of a two-game, total-goal series in the Zone 1 and 2 intermediate lacrosse playoff.

Salmonbellies defeated Coquitlam Alleys, 15-12, earlier this week to advance to the zone final with Victoria.

Game time at the Arena Sunday is 4 p.m. The teams will play the second game of the series in New Westminster on August 18, with the winner advancing to the provincial championship against Prince George on August 21-22.

Geologist Named for Apollo 17 Adventure

HOUSTON (AP). — The United States space agency today named Dr. Harrison H. Schmitt as the first scientist-astronaut selected for a space crew.

Schmitt, a Harvard-trained geolog st, will fly on Apollo 17, last of the moon-landing missions in the Apollo program. Commanding the flight will be Capt. Eugene A. Cernan of the U.S. Navy, veteran of two space trips. The other crew members will be Ronald E. Evans, a navy lieutenant commander who has now flown in space.

Cernan and Schmitt will land on the moon.

Named backups for the mission were the astronauts who last week completed the historic Apollo 15 flight—David R. Scott, James B. Irwin and Alfred M. Woren, all air force officers.

The naming of Schmitt was a victory for the space agency scientific community, which has long said the agency has given preference to long-time jet pilots in selecting space crews.

Bumped from a chance to fly to the moon by the Schmitt selection was Col. Joseph H. Engle of the air force, one-time X15 pilot who had trained for months with Cernan and Evans as the backup crew for Apollo 14.

The Apollo 16 crew, named previously, consists of Cmdr. John W. Young of the navy, Maj. Charles M. Duke of the air force and Lt.-Cmdr. Thomas K. Mattingly, also of the navy. Young and Duke are to explore near the crater Descartes in the moon's central highlands.

Apollo 16 is scheduled next March and Apollo 17 in December, 1972.

Scientists believe that while pilot-astronauts have done well for science on the surface, a trained geologist would be able to make more meaningful on-the-spot observations and evaluations.

Schmitt is the only one of NASA's 13 scientist-astronauts who has worked actively toward a landing mission, having served as backup lunar module pilot for Apollo 15. Most other scientists in the corps are involved in Skylab, a space station program which will follow Apollo.

City Council On Camera

HULL, Que. (CP) — Hull citizens will soon be able to follow municipal council meetings on cablevision.

Council has given permission to Laurentien Cablevision to install cameras in its meeting room and to transmit its meetings in whole or in part to cablevision viewers.

Mayor Marcel D'Amour said Thursday results of a trial period will determine whether the service will be continued.

RUNNING OUT OF WATER? Not at all—canoeists always do a final sprint and this Manitoba canoe team raced its way to victory. Running and carrying a canoe at the same time obviously requires a fine co-ordination of leg action. Last leg of the Centennial canoe race ended on the legislature lawn Thursday evening. North, South Tempers Rise

Irish Crisis Spreads

Times News Services

BELFAST, Northern Ireland — Premier Brian Faulkner said today his government has broken all links with the government of the Irish Republic.

Faulkner made the announcement following a call by Irish Republic Prime Minister Jack Lynch for the resignation of the Faulkner government. Lynch urged an equal voice in the North Ireland government for the Catholic minority and the Protestant majority.

Tempers between the two countries rose as Roman Catholic refugees continue to flee south into the mainly Catholic Irish Republic.

But violence seemed to be on the wane after four days of shooting and firebombing. The death toll stood at 25.

BACKING IRA

Faulkner denounced Lynch for calling for a new government in Northern Ireland and accused him of backing the outlawed Irish Republican Army in seeking the downfall of Faulkner's administration.

"Indeed," Mr. Lynch now clearly commits himself and his government to support by political means what the IRA seeks to achieve by violent means — the overthrow of the Northern Ireland government," the Northern Ireland premier said.

A man died in a shooting incident in Londonderry Thursday night, and another was killed in a gunbattle with British troops in the Roman Catholic Bogside district. The army said its troops were ambushed and returned the fire. A pistol was found beside the dead man, the army said.

Two incidents in Belfast Thursday night caused fear that the IRA may be launching a new type of terrorism.

JORDAN ISOLATED IN LATEST ARAB ROW

The escalating bitterness between Syria and Jordan was prompted by border clashes in the last three days between the two countries. For details see story on Page 2.

Damascus said that along with cutting diplomatic ties, Jordan is being denied access to the Mediterranean Sea and its planes banned from Syrian air space.

In recent months, Iraq, Libya and Algeria have all severed relations with Hussein's regime in Amman. Hussein's only Arab ally is Saudi Arabia.

Air Fare Price War Now Thought Certain

MONTREAL (CP)—Five airlines believe a price war benefitting North Atlantic passengers will continue following the breakdown of negotiations for a new fares package.

Aer Lingus, the Irish state airline, announced today sharp cuts on flights between North America and Ireland purchased three months in advance.

On Thursday, Air Canada, CP Air, BOAC of Britain, and Lufthansa of West Germany said they intended to introduce cut-rate fares.

Earlier this summer, most airlines flying the North Atlantic route introduced round-trip fares of about $300 for youths, in an attempt to meet strong competition from charter operators.

A meeting by 40 airline members of the International Air Transport Association began in Montreal June 29 to hammer out a new rate structure for the North Atlantic routes but the talks broke down Wednesday after 44 days when Lufthansa cast a sole dissenting vote against a fares package that featured cheaper excursion and youth fares.

BYPASS IATA

The five airlines then announced plans to go ahead with their own lower rates outside the IATA structure.

Lufthansa has until Sept. 1 to change its mind and passengers might have to wait until Feb. 1 for new rates if the West German airline maintains its position. If it accepts the package instead, new rates would come into effect April 1.

Aer Lingus fares for passengers who book three months in advance for a 22-to-45-day stay in Europe will be $189 off season and $239.04 at peak holiday times for a New York-Dublin flight.

The current regular economy return fare between Dublin and New York is $500. From Montreal it is $487.

Airline and IATA prices are quoted in U.S. funds.

At a news conference Thursday, H. Don Reynolds, chairman of the conference, held under the auspices of the International Air Transport Association, said Lufthansa's position was "so rigid" that there was no further room for negotiation.

The airline was given until Sept. 1 to make its final decision known. If its rejection

Canoeists' Last Leg to City Provides Colorful Spectacle

It was a grand show.

No matter that one of the Yukon crew tested the salt-chuck during the final sprint. Or that somebody slipped a bit of crass commercialism into the commentator's patter.

They were lined up three and four-deep around the Causeway and Inner Harbor Thursday night when, shortly after 7 p.m., 12 voyageur canoes, representing Canada's 10 provinces and two territories paddled in to end a 632-mile trip from Fort St. James, through the interior and across the Strait of Georgia to Victoria.

"There you have the equality of our country, ladies and gentlemen," intoned the announcer as the 12 canoes went into an intricate circle manoeuvre before the final sprint.

"There are no sharp corners — we're all Canadians."

The Manitoba crew, with 146 points total, was over-all winner after Thursday night's sprint, the last of 12. New Brunswick's entry, first over the finish line in the Victoria sprint, finished second over all with 144 points followed by: Quebec, 140; B.C., 131; Ontario, 126; Northwest Territories, 111; Saskatchewan, 95; Yukon, 89; Alberta, 69; Nova Scotia, 39½; Prince Edward Island, 38; and Newfoundland, 37½.

The B.C. Centennial '71 Canoe Pageant was sponsored by the federal state department, which provided $3,500 in prize money to be divided on a pro rata basis between the 12 teams competing.

The hapless Yukon paddler who hit the drink during the sprint, Robert Sharp of Whitehorse, said it was a result of a tricky bit of strategy as the canoes rounded the turn between the Causeway and the Johnson St. Bridge.

The canoes jammed, he said, his crew switched sides and "all of a sudden there were five on one side of the canoe and only myself on the other. I was pulling so hard I pulled myself right out of the canoe."

PICKED UP

He was picked up by a safety boat none the worse for his dip in the harbor.

Starkell is no newcomer to the canoe marathon world. He was captain of the Manitoba team in the Montreal-New York race in 1966 and the centennial race from Rocky Mountain House, Alta., to Montreal in 1967.

W. P. Stewart, chief of the English division, state department information services, travelled with the centennial canoe pageant through its entire route.

And he wasn't altogether happy with things. "From what some of the local centennial committees did," he said, "we pretty well had to have people there or nobody would have known about the pageant at all."

The smaller centres along the route, he said, were fine. But support in Vancouver, for example, was poor.

And Victoria's reception he rated as excellent.

SHIPS FACE MONTH IN HOLDING PATTERN

Empty U.S. freighters are clogging Island ports while longshoremen continue to give priority to Canadian cargoes in the seventh week of the U.S. west coast dock strike.

Shipping officials say the American vessels may face delays of a month or more before longshoremen at Ladysmith and Cowichan Bay get around to working on them. (See story Page 15).

Meanwhile, the San Francisco local of the longshoremen's union has started a campaign which might get negotiations under way again in the dispute.

Talks on local port rules are scheduled to resume Monday between Bay area longshoremen and the Pacific Maritime Association.

11-CENT RISE BREAKS TREND

Times News Services

OTTAWA — If your food bill was $13.30 in June, you had to pay $13.41 for the same items in July.

That increase of 11 cents may not sound too high, but it broke a long spell of food price stability.

One year ago in July the same food bill would have been $13.05, and in 1961, $10.

The cost of living index, which looks at more than 300 consumer goods and services, stands at one-third higher than it was 10 years ago.

Food prices jumped by a remarkable 2.2 per cent last month. For the past several months, food prices have been generally lower than a year ago, but this sunny period was ended by the sharp July increase.

All indexes are based on a monthly sampling survey across the country and include items purchased regularly.

It can be expected that fresh vegetable prices will come down as soon as Canadian crops are harvested.

Housing costs, one-third of the index, also rose considerably last month, mainly because of new house prices and higher rents. Textiles and electricity also are higher.

FIRE BLOWS UP ALONG WITH BRIDGE

HOPE (CP) — A sudden forest fire in the Fraser Canyon was getting special attention from the army Thursday.

It started in tinder-dry forest when the timber field squadron blew up an unused bridge.

About 125 men from Chilliwack in the Fraser Valley, 60 miles east of Vancouver, and a helicopter from FCB Comox were working under the supervision of forestry officials to contain the blaze. Extent of it was not known.

The bridge on the Old Dewdney Trunk Road was across the Coquihalla River about 36 miles east of here. The demolition job was successful.

FRIDAY THE 13TH BIT PURE BUNK—OR IS IT?

LONDON (AP) — So it's Friday the 13th and nobody believes that old bunk. Except

Kim Hughes of Steeple Ashton won a beauty contest with a week's holiday and a chance to compete for $2,400 and fame. She learned today she was disqualified after judges discovered she is only 14. The minimum age is 18.

Over in Peterport on the channel island of Guernsey, the police called in a locksmith. They had slammed the office safe shut and didn't know how to open it.

Up in Lancashire in the north, police faced a dilemma. A report came in that traffic on the express highway was being blocked by an exceedingly slow traveller on the inside slow lane. They rushed out and found the culprit to be a turtle which escaped from his master, nine-year-old Mark Williams.

Richard Bromley-Davenport went to a fancy dress ball dressed as an army intelligence officer. He got picked up for impersonating an officer and paid $48 costs for a quick hearing and a sympathetic discharge.

So it's Friday the 13th and for some it can't get over soon enough.

GARBAGE BATTLE heats up in Ottawa today when picketers at the garages of Ottawa Disposal Systems Ltd. are joined by members of the Young New Democratic movement in attempt to stop garbage trucks from heading out for pick-ups. Police clear a path through the picketing. Non-union help has been used during the strike. (CP Wirephoto)

Lillooet, Cranbrook Fire Menace Fades

VANCOUVER (CP) — Enormous tracts of British Columbia timberland are aflame today in a mounting forest fire crisis, but the siege was lifted on two fire-menaced communities hundreds of miles apart.

The potential disaster points had been Lillooet, a Fraser Canyon community of 1,800 and, to a lesser degree, the 13,000-population city of Cranbrook near the Alberta border.

On Wednesday night at Lillooet, 120 miles northeast of Vancouver, an Indian church and 12 homes were destroyed when fire roared into the west end of the village.

Thursday, fire erupted suddenly in a timbered area northwest of Cranbrook and caused short-lived concern. Driven by brisk winds, it swept over 40 acres before it was brought under control.

No homes were damaged, although it penetrated within one-half mile of the city limits.

Meanwhile, forest ranger, Superintendent Jack Cawston said at Lillooet that carelessness was the probable cause of the fire which threatened to wipe the village off the map.

"While no conclusive evidence was found," he said, "it is most probable that the fire was caused from a discarded match or cigarette butt of a careless smoker."

Uvic Students Will Increase

A slight increase in the number of students at the University of Victoria can be expected this year, according to figures released Thursday by admissions officer Ron Jeffels.

Jeffels said about 5,200 students are expected to be on campus Dec. 1, the day population statistics are compiled. This figure represents a slight rise from the 1970 figure of 5,031, and an even slighter gain from 1969 when 5,123 students were attending classes.

Jeffels said the Uvic situation is indicative of "a general trend in universities across North America. We appear to be on a plateau right now."

Also affecting the figures, he said, is the opening this year of Camosun College, which will take first and second year students.

"There is also an economic stress factor at work," he said. Students may apply and then find it impossible to attend later, due to financial problems."

Jeffels said students these days are placing more emphasis on gaining experience before taking a university education, and often hope to gain that experience by travelling throughout the world.

"There is the tendency of students to delay their university education for a year or two. Many say their university education will become more valuable after they become experienced. It's part of the new existentialist philosophy. They say: 'I want experience before I want essence.'"

6,000 NOTICES

Jeffels said about 6,000 notices of admission and re-registration had been sent out to prospective students, of which about 5,500 are expected to register in early September.

The attrition rate, he said, is largely due to students "double-banking" — also applying at other universities to afford a better choice.

Of those 5,500, another 300 are expected to drop out before Dec. 1 for various reasons.

Jeffels said 285 graduate students are expected to attend Uvic this year, the same number as last year.

. . . IRISH CRISIS

homes of two Belfast businessmen and sprinkled gasoline over their furniture and set it on fire. A fire department spokesman said damage to both homes was extensive.

It was feared the two incidents might be the start of a campaign of personal intimidation by the IRA, who have found themselves outgunned by the British Army and are reported to be short of arms and ammunition.

Cabinet ministers, judges, industrialists and top-ranking army and police officers were rumored to be on a list for similar IRA action.

Troops and roaming gunmen in Belfast exchanged shots but no casualties were reported. Four explosions occurred in the town of Newry, near the Irish border, and a frontier roadblock at Aughnacloy, County Tyrone, was peppered by a dozen shots from the Irish side of the border.

The News Letter, a Belfast morning paper catering to Ulster's Protestant majority, expressed outrage at Lynch's remarks and said they constitute "an affront to civilized society."

Sources in London said they believe the British government will reject Lynch's proposals. Prime Minister Edward Heath is reported determined to see the 12,500 troops in Northern Ireland restore order before he considers any political action.

More than 6,000 Catholics are estimated to have fled to the Irish Republic and the Dublin government expects the number to reach at least 10,000 by Saturday.

Two thousand Protestants also have left their homes in Belfast and taken shelter in schools, churches and other public buildings.

The British Red Cross flew in supplies of blankets, diapers and pillows to Belfast. Food stocks are running dangerously low, and long lines form outside bakeries each morning to get what bread is available.

'Paper Tiger' Prowls Again

By BRIAN BUTTERS

President Nixon's planned visit to China is an example of "the famous American paper tiger" in action, ex-missionary and China expert Dr. James Endicott said today.

The chairman of the Canadian Peace Council said in an interview that Nixon's visit is "an admission of the failure of American policy in dealing with China over the years."

"It's the old John Foster Dulles policy, which recommended the non-recognition of the regime of Chiang Kai-shek and the surrounding of China with peripheral armies," he said. "It's incredible how unrealistic the American analysis of China has been."

THROUGH MOTIONS

Endicott said the move by Nixon is also motivated politically, that Nixon hopes to get re-elected by going through the motions with China.

But Endicott added that the China visit indicates some groundwork has been laid in China-U.S. relations.

It is now probable, he said, that China will be allowed into the United Nations — "they wouldn't have agreed to the visit without that" — and that the U.S. definitely plans to withdraw its trops from Vietnam.

Endicott spent 22 years in China as a missionary, and another two as an official adviser to the government of Chiang Kai-shek. But he later decided that the nationalists were wrong in their views and sided with the revolutionary element in China.

He said he is a personal friend of Chinese Premier Chou En-lai and has met and talked to Mao Tse-tung.

What kind of a man is Mao?

"He's a philosopher, and also a shrewd and capable organizer," Endicott said, "a combination which is not seen very frequently."

He said Mao has been successful in integrating the basic philosophy of Marxism into the Chinese framework of Confucius-based beliefs.

Endicott said the Russians have been "very stupid in their attitude toward China. "They're still under the impression that Mao's cultural revolution was a failure, that millions of Chinese are starving."

"Now hundreds of people are going there and seeing this is not true. They are proving the Russians wrong."

BLUNDER

"I think Trudeau panicked," he said. "They had all that was necessary in the Criminal Code to round up anyone guilty of criminal acts. The War Measures Act was unnecessary."

"They had the chance to arrest anyone they wanted and yet they didn't pick up a single member of the Mafia. So whom do they arrest? Members of our peace committee."

He said the federal government's action in the Quebec crisis was a "warning to the people of Quebec that we could compel them by force to stay in Confederation. If we did compel them, it would be disastrous."

Does Endicott consider himself a Communist? "I'm not a Communist, but a liberal Christian reformer, with roots in the Bible," he said. "I'm for spcial justice, especially for the poor. My sympathies lean toward Marxism but I don't call myself a Marxist."

"A Christian liberal philosophy is close to the philosophy of socialists," he said.

The Canadian Peace Council has about 200,000 sympathizers, he said, who advocate abolition of nuclear weapons and believe that a military solution is not possible for the world's problems. Any type of imperialism, such as the actions of the U.S. in Southeast Asia, is also not acceptable, he said.

Endicott is in Victoria to speak to a public meeting at 8 tonight at The Inn, 1526 Cook Street. He has several other speaking engagements in B.C. before returning to his Toronto home.

Mr. Warren joined the external affairs department in 1945 and served in the high commissioner's office here between 1948 and 1951. He also was in the Canadian embassy at Washington between 1954 and 1957 before joining the finance department.

Mr. Warren will be replaced by J. F. Grandy, Who has been deputy minister of consumer and corporate affairs since that department's inception in 1967. Mr. Grandy, 52, had previously served in the external affairs department and for a time was an assistant deputy minister of finance.

A new deputy minister of consumer and corporate affairs will be announced later, the prime minister said in a statement.

Sylvain Cloutier, now deputy minister of national revenue, becomes deputy minister of national defence, while E. B. Armstrong moves from the defence deputy ministership to replace Mr. Cloutier.

J. Douglas Love, now deputy minister of labor, is moved to the same position in the department of regional economic expansion. He replaces Tom Kent, who was recently appointed to the Cape Breton Development Corporation.

Bernard Wilson, now an assistant deputy minister of labor, moves up to replace Mr. Love.

Mr. Warren will succeed Mr. Ritchie Oct. 1, when Mr. Grandy will also move into the trade and industry department. The other appointments are effective Sept. 1.

Syria Heavily Reinforcing Its Troops on Jordan Border

By The Canadian Press

Reuters news agency said reports received in Beirut, Lebanon, from Damascus said Syria is heavily reinforcing its troops along the Jordanian frontier. Columns of tanks were seen taking up positions in the border areas and other tanks, as well as troops and artillery, were on their way there.

Damascus radio said Jordanian troops opened tank and artillery fire on military and civilian positions, adding that five Jordanian tanks were destroyed.

The Jordanian government said earlier it had inflicted heavy losses on an unidentified force which had attacked Jordanian positions along the Syrian border.

Meanwhile, there were rumors in Amman that Syrian aircraft were being used in the border against Jordanians.

It was the third straight day the two armies battled. Relations started deteriorating last month when King Hussein cracked down on Palestinian Arab guerrillas in Jordan.

LACKED CONTROL

Jordan said the border clash Thursday that led Syria to break relations was caused by Syria's failure to keep a tight rein on the guerrillas.

A government spokesman, broadcasting over Amman Radio, said the fighting between Jordanian and Syrian forces Thursday was "regrettable but resulted from mounting and increased guerrilla raids across the border this week."

Syria closed its border with Jordan last month to protest King Hussein's successful crackdown on the guerrillas. On Thursday it became the third Arab country to sever relations with Jordan. Libya and Algeria did so earlier this year, and on July 19 Iraq closed its border with Jordan and barred all flights to and from Jordan over Iraqi air space.

The Jordan spokesman said his government proposed that a joint committee be formed to investigate the border incidents but Syria vetoed the plan.

Syria's official Radio Damascus said that the Jordanian tanks and armored cars opened fire Thursday on the Syrian border town of Dar'a, but the broadcast said the attack was beaten back with the loss of four Jordanian tanks. The report said a Jordanian armored car ran over a wounded Syrian soldier and killed him.

The Jordanian spokesman said the fighting began when "a force whose identity could not be determined advanced toward Jordanian positions and opened fire."

"Our forces returned fire in self-defence and damaged five attacking tanks and two artillery positions. There were no casualties."

The Jordanian reference to an unidentified force appeared to be a suggestion that units of the 8,000-man Palestinian Liberation Army, which has bases in southern Syria, were to blame for the fighting.

still stood at that time, the IATA membership would face an "open rate" situation or, in effect, price warfare.

As he was making his remarks, Air Canada and BOAC were announcing their intention to seek introduction of the lower fares regardless of whether Lufthansa came into line or an open rate situation developed.

Along with U.S. carriers Trans World Airlines and Pan American Airways, the two airlines were in the vanguard of those attending the conference in their support of a cut-rate 90-day advance purchase.

Such a fare, aimed at the vacation trade, was eventually included in the fares package and was priced at less than $200 round trip between Western Europe and the Eastern North America.

It was designed to compete with the independent charter airlines which have been gobbling up much of the scheduled airlines' business in recent years.

OUTLINES INTENTIONS

In his statement, Yves Pratte, chairman of Air Canada, said:

"If . . . there is no industry agreement by Sept. 1, it is still our intention to file rates is accordance with our proposals.

By Thursday night, CP Air had joined the fray. H. Bryan Renwick, vice-president of marketing and sales, announced the airline would apply to the Canadian government for fares similar to those voted on at the IATA conference.

Meantime, Lufthansa appeared to be adamant in its opposition to the fares package following the collapse of the talks. In a statement issued from its head offices in Cologne, the airline said:

"In case it comes to an open rate situation, as looks possible, Lufthansa will offer its own tariffs which will mean an all-round simplification and reduction."

Stray Feathers

By HAROLD HOSFORD

Consider the lowly cowbirds. They're despised and reviled, with nearly every hand turned against them and all because the've solved the age-old problem of raising a family. Except for laying the eggs, cowbirds leave the rest of the job to some other bird.

North America's counterpart to the well-known European cuckoo, our brown-headed cowbirds — that's their square handle — build no nests but lay their eggs in the nests of other species which usually raise the young as if it were one of their own.

It's on these grounds that cowbirds stand condemned as parasites living off society and, even worse, of infidelity and polygamy. That they're guilty on the first count has been proved over the years by the numberless nests of small birds obliged to raise cowbirds instead of their own kind. On the second count, there is now strong evidence to indicate that cowbirds are shining examples of marital fidelity.

RECENT ARRIVALS

Cowbirds are comparatively recent arrivals in Victoria. Their spread into this part of North America is part of a pattern developing since the white man began his assault on the forests of this continent.

Originally residents of the plains of central North America, cowbirds spread northeast into the broad-leafed forests as the land was cleared for settlement. The did the same in the northwest where clearing and extensive agricultural development now dot the once-unbroken cover of coniferous forests.

Historically, cowbirds were associated with the vast herds of bison which once roamed the plains. They followed the grazing animals, feeding on insects stirred up in the process. Today domestic livestock have replaced the bison in the lives of cowbirds.

It was this association with bison that brought out the first attempts to explain the cowbirds' parasitic habits. Early naturalists hypothesized that since they must follow the erratic wanderings of the bison for subsistence, cowbirds must forego the necessity of having a specific home base. Somehow — and this was never explained — they gave up their normal nesting habits for parasitism.

This rather romantic idea has not survived the test of time. We know know that parasitism is much more complicated and that forms of it are found throughout the cowbird clan.

For example in South America two species of cowbird, the bay-winged and shiny cowbirds, show the stages towards parasitism that have permeated the whole cowbird family.

The bay-wings sometimes build their own nests but more often expropriate the nest of some other bird in which to lay and incubate their eggs. On the other hand, shiny cowbirds don't seem to be particular where their eggs go, wasting large numbers in places where there is no chance of the egg being incubated and hatched.

FINE POINT

Then there's the screaming cowbird; they've carried the parasitism thing to a fine point. They lay their eggs in the nests, either expropriated or self-built, of their close relative the bay-winged cowbird.

So parasitism is a much more complex process than can be explained by the bison follower theory.

Banding — placing colored plastic rings on the legs of cowbirds — has disclosed, at least in our North American cowbirds, that they are monogamous and have strong territorial instincts. The same female will return to the same breeding area year after year and apparently even develops a strong preference for host species for her eggs.

The male, on the other hand, unlike most other territorial species, will tolerate other cowbirds on his territory but goes through a rather ritualized performance of posturing and feather-fluffing to show that they are there at his discretion.

ONLY ONE

Studies have shown that only about one of four cowbird eggs is successfully raised to a fledgling. Hosts — the species used by the cowbirds — react in different ways to the imposition of a cowbird's egg into their lives. Some will desert their nexts and start again and others will just dump out the intruding egg.

But to the yellow-warbler goes the accolade for the ultimate solution to the problem. Yellow warblers just build a new nest over the old, burying the cowbird's egg as well as any of their own still in the nest. Eleven-storey yellow warbler nests have been found, each with its layer of unhatched eggs.

Parasitism is a hard fact of life, a natural and efficient part of the order of things but one which we, with our Judaic-Christian background find difficult to accept. It is also a relationship that has worked well over thousands of years and one, so far as is known, that has never caused the extinction of any species.

New Sex Perilous To Career

BERNARDS TOWNSHIP, N.J. (AP) — A music teacher who had his sex changed has rejected a school board offer allowing her to continue teaching if she gave up the 14 years tenure she earned as a man.

The board made its offer at an open meeting Thursday, but Paula Miriam Grossman, 52, rejected it, saying she will fight to keep her job and full privileges.

"I don't think their request was fair, but I expected it," she said.

Under the offer, she could have remained teaching in September if she agreed to resign and to obtain a state teaching certificate in her female name. The board also wanted her to agree to switch from elementary to high school teaching.

HAS WIFE, THREE GIRLS

Until last March, she was Paul Monroe Grossman, a music teacher at Cedar Hill Elementary School with a wife and three daughters.

After sex reassignment surgery in March, she returned to the classroom dressed as a man.

In May, she told School Superintendent Myron Heading-ton of the sex change, and he notified the school board June 1.

Despite controversy that has ensued in this affluent community 30 miles from New York City, she says she wants to keep her job and will continue to live with her wife of 19 years and their three children.

The board said it has tried to do justice to a teacher who had been in the school system 14 years. It offered to maintain her $14,300 annual salary, but the members conceded that under their proposal she could be dismissed "at their pleasure."

400 Ex-Wrens To Attend Reunion in City

About 400 former Wrens will be in Victoria this month to attend the fifth national WRCNS reunion at the University of Victoria.

The reunion, Aug. 27 to 29 at the University of Victoria, is the first in Victoria. The last time the WRCNS association held its national meeting in B.C. was 1958 in Vancouver.

A wine and cheese party will get things off to a start the first evening. Next day, many visitors will be taken on a sea trip aboard four Esquimalt-based minesweepers. Others will have a bus tour of the Saanich Peninsula, culminating in a visit to Butchart Gardens.

A church service will be held at the university on the final day of the meeting, with activities winding up with tea at Royal Roads Military College.

Hurt City Girl Improving

An 18-year-old Victoria girl, a passenger in a car that crashed in Beacon Hill Park Wednesday afternoon is in good condition at St. Joseph's Hospital today following surgery.

Leslee Campbell, 2656 Asquith, suffered internal injuries, hospital officials said.

Police said the car in which she was riding went out of control about 3 p.m. and hit a concrete wall on Circle Drive in the park.

The Turning-Point

THE ALDERMEN ELECTED TO guard the interests of Victoria have secured an excellent "compromise" from Mr. J. S. Reid, the Vancouver developer with the Wharf Street property. Instead of three high-rise towers — one of 25 storeys and two of 19 storeys — they have cleverly forced Mr. Reid to agree to build two towers — one 26 storeys high and the other 23. In this way the city council has prevented congestion of people and traffic on Wharf Street and preserved Victoria's fine view of the Sooke Hills and sunsets.

The bargain sounds so incredible it is difficult to believe. And Mr. Reid himself issued a prophecy of the now almost inevitable results for the future with his remark at the conclusion of yesterday's meeting: "I think high-rises should be encouraged there . . . I say it is very desirable because you can see through it".

The gate is now wide open. With two of the highest buildings in town pushing into the air opposite Bastion Sqare the way will be cleared for a row of them down the shore to Johnson Street Bridge and beyond. For Council has now accepted the principle that downtown Victoria is to have a high-rise look, just like every other city on the continent that has neither the courage nor the imagination to preserve a different character.

The lack of an over-all plan for the city has led to this situation. There has been no effort to plan a cityscape that would preserve the best of old Victoria and marry it to what would be the most appropriate of new developments. There has been no effective assessment of what the new high-rises will do to Victoria, quite apart from walling the city off from the sea that is its greatest natural asset. Nobody has proved that we need them.

High-rises normally try to monopolize public parksides or public watersides, so as to gain the best for the tenants at the expense of the community behind the buildings. Has Council sat down to consider the costs that will soon have to be faced in rerouting high-rise traffic from overburdened waterfront streets — the lesson that every city which has over-built has had to learn? Has it worked out what a walled-in waterfront will cost the inhabitants and businesses on the landward side of the wall?

A major error in judgment has been made, no matter how many immediate dollars the high-rise may appear to add to the city's tax revenues. You can't really blame Mr. Reid, of course. He's a businessman and promoter. He just brought his show into the village and the village elders bought it.

Hang-up in the Sky

LUFTHANSA'S REJECTION OF the package deal sought by other members of the International Air Transport Association to lower transatlantic fares cannot permanently prevent a cut in the cost to the passenger for flights from this country to London and return. The companies seeking the reduction are not moved by philanthropy. They have to bring charges down to meet the competition of charter flights which so ate into revenue last year that a number of major lines operated in the red.

Under these circumstances, the comment of Mr. Yves Pratte, chairman of the board of Air Canada and the airline's chief executive officer, presents a clear picture of things to come. He forecasts a move to adopt the lower fares listed in the proposed package deal, with or without German agreement. Spokesmen for other airlines, notably BOAC, agree with him. They want a fare structure that will enable them to win some of the low-cost traffic now going by charter, expecting to make up through volume more than is dropped by cutting the price of tickets.

The reduction of charges would win wide approval from the travelling public interested primarily in moving from one destination to another in safety and at an economical fare. That is the formula which has brought success to so many excellent charter flights.

While the issue remains undecided during the pre-September period allowed Lufthansa to reconsider its position, attention might also be given by Air Canada to the question of low fares to and from London for traffic originating either in Victoria or Vancouver. The minimum suggested during this week's discussions for the Montreal-London return flight, plus present excursion flight costs from Victoria or Vancouver to Montreal and back, would still make the total appreciably higher than the average charter flight from the Pacific Coast to the British capital.

If Air Canada and others hope to claim a substantial share of the payloads now carried on group flights, their competitive price cannot remain higher than that of a comfortable charter.

IATA fare agreements were created to protect the airlines from costly internal price wars. But the protection itself has become a handicap in the face of popular charter competition. The IATA is now confronted by the necessity of adapting to meet the new situation or risking a break-up of the global organization. The public will no longer suffer needlessly high costs imposed by an international group. And the airlines are beginning to realize it.

The Teacher Market

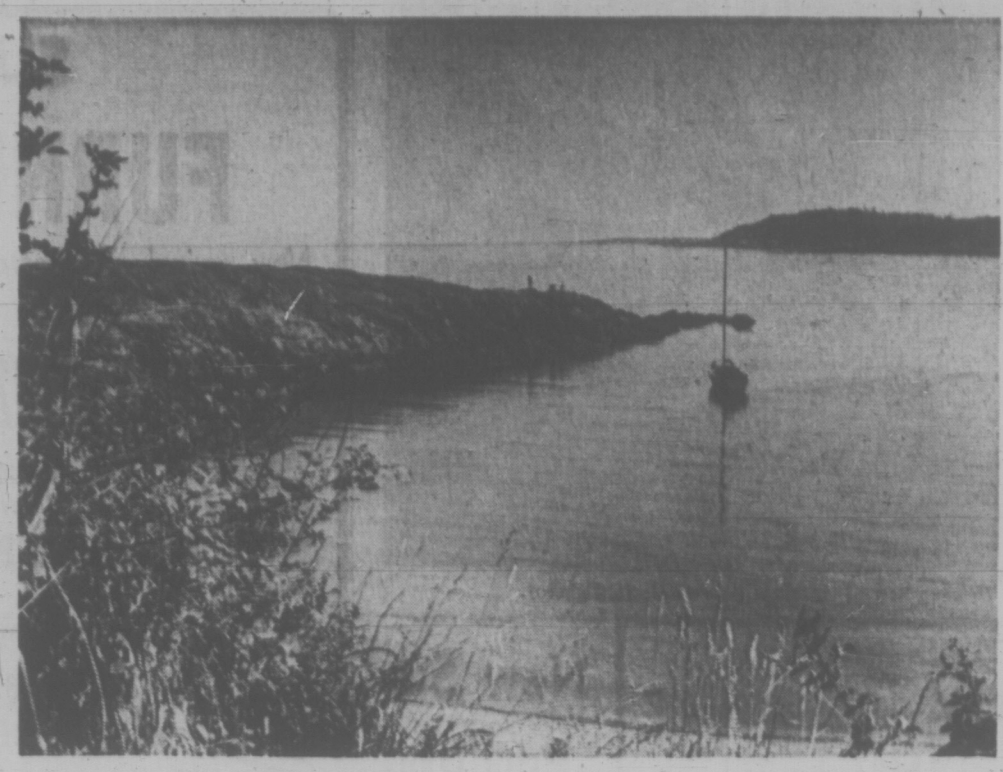
COMMENTING ON THE PROSpects of teaching positions in elementary and secondary schools in this decade, Mr. A. W. Cowan of the federal department of Manpower and Immigration, who has published a study on the subject, remarks: "It seems clear that individuals seeking to enter the teaching profession in the 1970s can expect to encounter highly competitive conditions. In this situation, the specialist will have the advantage, generally speaking, and there will be more opportunities at the secondary than at the elementary level." Specialties which were in demand last year included French, art, music, special education and physical education.

The principal cause of the oversupply of teachers is the decline in the birth rate over the last 15 years and the economics of the profession which is keeping the teacher-pupil ratio stable. Mr. Cowan presumably is in a position to know the situation. His words could save prospective teachers future frustration and unemployment.

A Little Censorship

AT A RECENT SOVIET Writers' gathering the poet Yevgeny Yevtushenko told his fellow writers, among other things, that "We are the children of the 20th Congress that denounced the cult of personality . . ." When his speech was published in an offical journal the phrase was rewritten: "We are the children of party decisions . . ."

The official rendering of the phrase into something innocuous suggests not only that references to the 1956 party Congress that denounced Stalinism are reserved for spokesmen of the Politburo, but also that the "cult of personality" is not altogether out of fashion. The options for maintaining party rule are being kept open, dissidents to the contrary.



Off Haro Strait — Bill Halkett

Vacation Laborers

Ottawa Citizen

No one will quarrel with Premier Bourassa's statement at Victoria that separatism as a political force would die if Quebec were assured of maintaining its distinct identity within Confederation. But the means Mr. Bourassa proposes remain open to question.

He insists on making French the language of work in Quebec, and demands total control of social welfare. It is up to Quebec and to the large corporations, which are now moving toward the first goal, to attain it. But the second must depend on compromise, for Quebec's interests and Ottawa's conflict.

Thus far, Quebec expects all the compromises to be made by Ottawa. Indeed, it has insisted on complete surrender of the federal position. Behind the rhetoric about provincial rights lies the demand that Quebec decide the kind and amount of its welfare program, with Ottawa merely helping with the financing — presumably with money obtained from the "have" provinces of Ontario, British Columbia and Alberta.

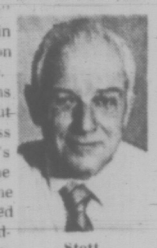
Small wonder that some of the provinces as well as Ottawa have resisted. Quebec's insistence has nothing to do with securing the survival of the French culture. It has to do with power.

THE COSTS COME HIGH

When Mother Nature Says 'Burn, Baby, Burn'

By ART STOTT

THE brown patches on the lawn that parched quickly last month tell the story of British Columbia's fast-ballooning fire hazard in the woods this summer, says W. C. "Cy" Phillips, forester in charge of suppression for the province. June's sustained rains promoted lush but shallow-rooted grass growth. When July's heat wave struck, the land dried out, the grass cured and died early. In the wildlands it and weeds became the tinder waiting a spark. Nature, in an excessive pattern of violence, supplied the spark — lightning.



Stott

So far this season about 60 per cent of the reported fires have been attributed to that cause against a normal yearly average of 40 per cent.

This is the current situation as the suppression crews assume responsibility for an ever-increasing area of the province. Twenty years ago the Forest Service concerned itself almost entirely with fire in the southern half of British Columbia. North of Prince George outbreaks were usually allowed to burn themselves out. The country was remote, access difficult and the capability of the suppression forces to reach the scene quickly with equipment to catch a fire before it spread was strictly limited.

Then came northern development. Expendable timber became valuable as the swing to the pulp economy pushed up from Prince George. What previously could be ignored required protection.

The difficulties have not been removed entirely by intensive use of aircraft and mechanical equipment. The Tee fire north of Liard Hot Springs on the Alaska highway has already this summer burned over an acreage equivalent to more than the annual total British Columbia burn during the last three years. Black spruce, of minimal commercial value, has been destroyed.

A Continuing Problem

The growing importance of northern timber emphasizes a continuing problem in suppression: Which fires should be attacked and contained — if possible — which should be allowed to run without serious threat to the provincial economy or the safety of people? Decision is up to the district forester, and decision is demanded almost instantaneously.

Some fires are beneficial. A stand of dead, decayed or infested trees, is better burned than left. The burn permits development of a new, healthier forest. But, points out Mr. Phillips, it takes nature close to a century to re-establish sturdy, useful growth, and there is little assurance that a fire left to burn will contain itself without endangering adjacent valuable stands. The district forester, making his quick decision, has to take in practical, economic and ecological considerations.

He can't afford to commit men and equipment to a fire with no hope of suppressing it. He is on doubtful ground when, since fighting frequently costs as much as a good stand is worth, he decides to protect something of little economic or public value. But he also must consider the ecological transformation fire may bring.

The last point is underscored by research in the Chilcotin. Before the arrival of white men, that area was burned over and fine fir forests were destroyed. Now only pockets of good timber are left there. The land is open for grazing and there is lots of grass. It is not, however, the Chilcotin of an earlier period.

In the fulness of time, fire would work, as it has done from the earliest days, as a natural process in cleaning up land and leading to regeneration. But as long as British Columbia depends on forest products as the basis of its economy, it can't afford the time. It cannot permit a break in the age category of trees which at present permits a sustained allowable cut.

Fire-Fighting Costs

Costs of fighting fires are rising, partly because of inflation, partly because of more expensive use of equipment (one bulldozer can be more effective than 100 men) and because manpower costs are also higher. Casual fire-fighters now receive $1.75 an hour and board, against a rate of 35 cents an hour in the 30s.

This season, the average cost of fighting a fire is about the same as that last year. Approximately $4.472 millions had been spent to the end of this week on about 1,900 outbreaks. The totals are lower than 1970, when expenses reached a record high.

Industry, because trees are its bread and butter, is good in bringing equipment and men into action to fight fires, though progress has created an anomaly here. Modern logging is automated. The old bull of the woods logger is being replaced by the operator of a machine. There are more mechanical operators, fewer Paul Bunyans.

No Improvement Likely

The situation is not likely to improve, either in cost or fire incidence. A more cautious, better informed public, including the nature boys of the back-to-the-land movement, may avoid causing outbreaks, but more people in the wilds pose added hazards. Furthermore, a cyclical weather pattern indicates more frequent bad fire years than at an earlier time — a development some ecologists blame on human pollution of the atmosphere to which is attributed hotter, more frequent summer dry spells. And the use of expensive equipment will continue. Where the service introduced experimental airtankers about a decade ago, along with a helicopter or two, it now has 14 tankers under contract and 24 helicopters. They pay off in getting into the battle quickly, before fire spreads. But they come high.

Audrey Johnson's lack of knowledge on the subject of theatre and her lay opinion of plays that she has seen are tolerable. However, such diatribes as her recent article on Ralph Allen and the Victoria Fair Theatre must not go unchallenged.

What experience qualifies her to pontificate on repertories, production standards and financial managements of theatre companies here and elsewhere? Has she ever worked in or studied the theatre of Stratford and New York? Indeed, has she ever seen plays in either location? How does she have the nerve to compare Victoria Fair and a small repertory budget with the enormous Stratford operaton? Working for a newspaper should not give one the automatic right to expound at will on subjects that they apparently know nothing about.

Ralph Allen has been largely responsible for the steady growth of Victoria Fair Theatre in each of its three seasons. Audiences decide a theatre's quality. I urge the people of Victoria to come and see Justice, Not Revenge; Room Service and A Trip Abroad and judge for themselves. — Harvey M. Miller, 3539 Richmond Road.

With Disgust

It was with a feeling of disgust that I read Sounding Board by Mrs. Audrey Johnson on Saturday, August 7, 1971.

It is no secret that Mrs. Johnson has been engaged, over the past several months, in a personal disagreement with Dr. Ralph Allen, director of Victoria Fair Theatre. Her dislike of Dr. Allen, however childish, is of course her own business; but when this dislike seriously prejudices her objectivity as a drama critic and a journalist, then it becomes the business of us all.

Prior to her disagreement with Dr. Allen, Mrs. Johnson had, in the main, nothing but praise for the Victoria Fair Theatre Company. In order to justify this statement, let me quote one sentence from each of her reviews of the seven plays, produced by this same company, prior to this year:

Measure for Measure: "If what occurred Thursday night at the Phoenix Theatre is an indication of what we may expect from the University of Victoria theatre division from this point, some of the most exciting theatre in Canada may soon be happening on our doorstep."

Tartuffe: "Long, long and often may they reign there, for this is just the kind of beautiful and essentially professional performance that the McPherson has been awaiting since its opening."

Hamlet: "From the magnificent broodingly Gothic, eminently actable set by Robert Cothran to the close ensemble performance of the company, there is much to admire."

The Merchant of Venice: "It is also a 'must-see' . . . if brilliant stage craft fascinates you or if you are hungry for some fine polished acting in a total concept worthy of the term, 'professional theatre'."

Androcles and the Lion: "This bubbling, buoyant joke, clear, crisp and beautifully paced throughout its brief length . . . is perfect for the family, perfect for a summer evening and a very definite 'don't miss'."

And then Mrs. Johnson had a disagreement with Dr. Allen and on Saturday, August 7, 1971, she said:

"At best the Victoria Fair acting company is competent; at worst, mediocre. Nowhere is it brilliant. And to describe it as versatile is pure hyperbole."

Mrs. Johnson's complete change of attitude, coming when it did, suggests that she is displaying the epitome of small-town journalism. — (Mrs.) Penelope S. Devlin, No. 3, 1462 Rockland Ave.

The Arrangements Completed

Recently I had my engagement announcement printed in your papers and was somewhat annoyed at some unexpected results. These specifically were several advertising pieces of mail and offers of good bargains on flowers, baked goods and special wedding music. I just wanted a chance to say that not only do I disapprove of such a practice of getting business from information in engagement announcements, but these announcements are put in usually three weeks prior to the wedding and all plans and arrangements are finalized at this point. In discussing this with friends I find I am not the only one to receive such special offers.

I realize that the papers are not responsible for such and can do nothing to prevent it, but maybe someone will read this letter and know that it is not appreciated. — Miss Helen Walters, 83 Sims.

The Ulster Scots

The people of Northern Ireland are Lowland Scots Presbyterians, as different as possible in race, religion and language to the Irish.

They were planted in Northern Ireland by the English government to help maintain the domination of the Protestant religion and the British power over Ireland.

For more than 300 years they have been loyal and steadfast in these objects. The ideas of the British government, the British people and the world in general on these subjects have changed. Those of the people of Northern Ireland have not. Therein lies the difficulty.

The people of Northern Ireland belive that if the worst came and they were abandoned by the British government, that with the help of God (whose power is irresistible) they could still conquer the Irish and reimpose the dominance of the Protestant religion and of the British Sovereign in Ireland. — J. P. Thornton, 943 Wilmer.

Czech Invasion Anniversary

The invasion of Prague, capital of Czechoslovakia by Soviet and Warsaw Pact Armies on August 21, 1968, assured Moscow of a continued flow of strategic military supplies to be used in Vietnam and Egypt. Soldiers and their families are depriving the Czechs of needed living quarters and food. Slow death by unremitting reprisals, loss of positions, jobs and now, again, the added terror of being taken to concentration camp are continuing.

Technicians and professionals are forced to serve Moscow in different parts of the world while their families are mere hostages. More concentration camps are almost ready. There were 56 camps and 94,000 prisoners (prior to 1968) forced to build military installations and other projects. With stolen property and slave labor, Russia is doing well!

Are we to become their slaves also? Are we to keep on aiding the criminals?

The Warsaw Pact armies are to conduct manoeuvres. Are they again going to destroy crops? Why should NATO forces be reduced when it is clear that Moscow continues to increase her military power at the expense of her captive nations, and us? — Bessie S. Henry, 1306 Johnson.

Rhyming Thanks

On July 15, 1971, my husband and I were in Victoria, B.C., and while there I wrote the following:

Victoria
A Lovely Place
Full of Charm and
A Queenly Grace.
Where Visitors Are Welcomed at a Kindly Pace
And its World Famous Gardens Make One Think
Of a Heavenly Place.

The above is the feeling Victoria gave me. This is given to Victoria as my way of saying "Thanks" for a lovely visit — Esther B. Ostroff, 291 Capistrano Ave., San Francisco.

60 Years Ago

From the Times of August 13, 1911:

Politeness, honesty and hustle are the three prime requisites of the successful newsboy. So says "Noodles" Fagan, the famous newsboy, guest of the Daily Times, who appears at the Empress theatre this week in a clean-cut vaudeville act. To this advice he adds the injunctions, "Don't miss one school session, don't drink, don't chew, keep your hands clean, keep your character clean."

Musings From Quebec On the Future of Canada

By CLAUDE RYAN
Le Devoir

On the morrow of the "no" of Mr. Bourassa to the Victoria Charter, the mail from English Canada, which daily brings us the reactions of our fellow citizens in the other provinces, suddenly took on a tone of violence, even of an unusual coarseness.

Quebec's reply rubbed the opinion of English Canada in that which it holds most dear. Numerous were the English-speaking correspondents who said they were ready, on the day after the Victoria setback, to bring Quebec to reason by force or even to invite it to leave Confederation once and for all.

The Globe and Mail had published on June 23 an article in which the director of Le Devoir was taken to task for having dared write that, in the eventuality Mr. Bourassa had given an affirmative reply to the Victoria ultimatum, Le Devoir "would fight him without hesitation."

Wasting Time

A woman correspondent from Toronto sent us a few days later a copy of the article from The Globe and Mail, accompanied by this note: "There is no longer any reason which justifies the rest of Canada in wasting further time seeking to understand and satisfy the province of Quebec. That is quite simply an impossible task. Please, go your own way. That will certainly not be without difficulties but Canada will thus save millions of dollars, and peace and prosperity will finally wash over the rest of the country."

More civilized, a lawyer who is well known in the Queen City sent this line: "You are in the process of ruining one of the last chances that you had to make a positive contribution to the progress of Canada. What you are asking is that your province become a state within a state. That proposition is unacceptable to almost all Canadians living outside Quebec; it is also, I suspect, unacceptable to the majority of Quebecers themselves."

Never perhaps, for a number of years, had an ancient muffled hostility that thousands of English-speaking people still nourished towards Quebec resurfaced with such spontaneity.

Let Water Flow

I did not find an echo in these letters telling me that it was necessary to let flow a little water in the river before drawing conclusions. English Canada has its own way of being sentimental. It was necessary to avoid confusing, in this instance, sentiment and opinion. I was hoping that the mail and the meetings would soon reveal more positive aspects of the attitude of our partners.

If the reaction of the papers of Toronto and certain correspondents accurately expressed the attitude in English Canada, we might as well begin counting, I told myself, without bitterness but also without too much regret, the days which separate us from a definite break.

That was however only one side of the picture. In the course of the last weeks, three publications which are religious in character with large English-speaking audiences — the United Church Observer (organ of the United Church of Canada), the Western Catholic Reporter (a weekly of excellent standing published in Edmonton) and the Canadian Churchman (organ of the Anglican Church of Canada) did me the honor of reproducing the text of a speech on the October crisis and the rapport between Canada and Quebec that I had given in Toronto in February.

This initiative was all the more interesting because I was recounting in this speech the principal themes developed in Le Devoir during the October crisis and because the positions taken by the paper at that time had the effect of disquieting English-Canadian opinion.

Well, the publication of this text brought me some mail of different inspiration from that previously.

A lady from Willowdale, Ont. writes to me, it is true, in a condescending tone, that the French-Canadians had no future in America and that instead of vainly pursuing ruinous chimeras, they would best invest all their energies in the survival of English Canada (this woman must have read Creighton: she reasons like him, style notwithstanding).

Ontario Milk Cow

Another correspondent takes up the theme of Ontario-a-milk-cow-for-Quebec in order to conclude that the French Canadians are the ones most responsible for their difficulties.

But besides these correspondents of limited intelligence, I find a great number who react in a much more positive manner. A citizen of British Columbia, who takes the side of the NDP, writes that he interprets Quebec's decision as the expression of a sincere desire to find a real and durable solution.

Aware of the gravity of the misunderstanding issuing from the constitutional talks, he makes it clear that it is up to Quebec, the only province to say "no" to the Victoria Charter, to define the conditions of an acceptable solution.

Will it be necessary in the future for the negotiations to take place among eleven or between two? R. S. remains perplexed on this subject. He is nonetheless disposed to examine with sympathy the idea of a more authentic negotiation.

Another correspondent from the West recognizes the general ignorance of English Canada towards Quebec. He underlines the decisive impact of distances in Canada and recalls that Canadians from the West have sometimes the impression of being as little understood as Quebecers.

He fears that because it is dedicating its energies to tasks which are so uncreative, this country will end by succumbing to the great challenges which geography and social needs pose.

This correspondent does not judge Quebec. He concludes by recalling that Canada needs Quebec and by hoping that the same sentiment will one day manifest itself in Quebec towards the rest of Canada.

Accept Complexity

In these letters I find many passages in which I am told, on such and such a point, the correspondent is not able to share my view. But the disagreement is courteous, respectful and loyally expressed. It is written in each case with an attitude made up principally of humility before the complexity of the problem, of the desire to know more about it before coming to judgment.

The first reaction of English Canada, after the Victoria setback, was to conclude that Quebec would have liked once more to impose its will on the rest of Canada and that Mr. Bourassa — on whom one had placed without realizing it the most unrealistic hopes — had shown weakness by ceding to the pressures of nationalist elements in his province.

This first movement of irritation was followed by a kind of satisfied fatalism since Quebec doesn't want the Charter that was proposed to it, then it can continue to live with the BNA Act of which it does not cease to complain, and give us peace.

Such is always, without doubt, the reaction of this English-speaking "hard core" of whose existence the Victoria setback reminded us brutally. The mail of the last days shows nevertheless that there exists also in English Canada, and even outside university circles, men and women who sincerely question themselves and who are even disposed to let themselves be questioned as to their present positions.

Time for Reflection

Will it be necessary to start all over again with these above the exhausting work of explanation that one thought to have accomplished in the last ten years? Will it be necessary to conclude that the time for colloquies, exchanges of correspondence and meetings is over, and that all these palavers will only slow the march of Quebec towards the realization of its destiny?

Summer is the season for patient reflections not conclusions. The gigantic effort at interpretation which remains frightens me. I must say to myself on the other hand that we shall have to, in any manner, live together towards the future and that the questions loyally shared at this moment can only help to prepare solutions which will one day be more acceptable to all.

Parks Are for People

By ALAN BRIEN
New Statesman

LONDON — The other day, feeling as stout as Cortez, and twice as breathless, dabbled with lovely, fresh-squeezed sweat in the muggy morning heat, I stood silent upon a peak in Parliament Hill Fields, watching my two small children racing their bikes along a distant path.

There was not another soul in sight. Just green flesh falling away on every side in bosomy curves and swelling buttocks, interspersed with an occasional armpit of bristling bushes, to a misted, tree-fringed horizon.

A wild surmise seemed appropriate so I summoned my two out-riders, mounted my iron steed, and the three of us went slaloming down the slope, interweaving and missing each other by inches, wrapped in our old Western-movie fantasies, losing speed as we hit each new rearing wave of long grass, gathering impetus again as the ground fell away in a slippery trough under the front wheels, until we stopped at last, stuck in a marsh of yellow clay at the bottom of the valley.

I dare say it was an activity forbidden by the regulations, along with making fires and wearing ragged clothes and uttering street cries and playing musical instruments and all the other nuisances the public get up to when left to themselves in parks. But it was one of the most exhilarating experiences I have treated myself to in years.

It has always been a struggle to keep the parks of London open to the people. Until the 19th century, Regent's Park was still only available to the householders who lived around it.

▣

Hampstead Heath was saved from being a garden suburb, dotted with villas, by a local committee of obdurate do-gooders who campaigned for 41 years.

In 1905, 15,000 people demonstrated in defence of Peckham's One Tree Hill and prevented it being swallowed up by a golf club.

Since then, we seem to have lost some of our righteous indignation at such encroachments, too easily giving way to the demands of motorways, such as the one which consumed 23 acres of Hyde Park in 1958.

We have allowed our parks to be overlooked, and thus shrunk in atmosphere, to increase our dollar earnings, as when the Hilton Hotel was permitted to peer like a giant fossil giraffe into every glade from Park Lane — an intrusion inevitably followed by the 280-foot tower of the Knightsbridge barracks and now the planned 180-foot erection at Albert Gate.

It seems impossible to persuade the authorities that a park might be anything but a flat, ordered, geometric pattern, with well-drilled flowers and combed grass and manicured bushes, protected by an army of railings, evacuated at night of all but cats and sex-maniacs, where people, like dogs, walk obediently on leashes.

Just to vary the height, creating a web of hillocks and dales such as naturally exists on a larger scale on Hamptsead Heath, would introduce new vistas and surprises, new opportunities for privacy and quiet.

When the underground car park at Marble Arch (a burial place of tin gods more eerie and alien than any Egyptian tomb) was excavated, the saving of the cost of the 160,000 tons of clay away to Heston would have paid all the cost of landscaping. Instead the Ministry of Works recently spent more than £50,000 restoring the railings around the Park.

There is an ingrained assumption that people are a form of litter, ignored or tolerated in small heaps, but only fit to be bulldozed away by the police when they grow in a crowd.

▣

Already Britain has a density of 790 people to the square mile, 80 per cent of them in towns, with the population growing a thousand a day. We are going to live in crowds whether we like it or not.

The problem is not so much how to disperse them, as how to give them something to do.

I used to think when Alderman Sidebotham donated a seat near a bus stop in my home town that he was just an old fool seeking to perpetuate his name. But simply to provide somewhere to sit in the sun, on open corners, in empty back streets, in London would be a valuable amenity.

We need more barrow boys, street markets, mobile drink stalls, striped umbrellas. Pavement rendezvous. It is rare enough when we can walk and stand and sit outdoors in Britain without driving us back again whenever we start congregating.

The river Thames is also disgracefully cut off, only 9 per cent of its 40 miles of bankside available to those of us who like to spit over balustrades and throw sticks onto flowing water.

There are 58 miles of canal which millions who pass over and alongside it have never even seen. Here would be an ideal walking track for those of us who cannot work up a good glow on foot through being endlessly stopped at traffic lights or buffeted by shoppers with parcels.

I suppose no government now will ever reconsider Sir Patrick Abercrombie's brilliant, ambitious 1943 scheme for joining up our parks and turning London into an island encircled by green open space.

Too much of a threat to housing, to business premises and factories, too huge an investment, I suppose. But when it comes to building ring-roads, the obstacles are more easily overcome.

One of my own favorite projects, since buildings are growing higher and higher, covering the ground level in dead shadows, would be more roof gardens.

Why not make one compulsory on every office above so many stories — just as Berlin insists on one tree being planted for every four parking places?

It's a Game Of Numbers In Provinces

By A. TREMBLAY
Quebec Le Soleil

Compared with the rest of the country, Newfoundland, Nova Scotia, Quebec, Manitoba and Saskatchewan have seen their populations decrease during the last decade and the representation of these provinces in Ottawa will be modified in the next drawing of the federal electoral map.

It is more than likely this work will not be finished before the end of 1973. Thus the number of members will not change before the next federal election.

* * *

It is rumored that the Commons will have 270 seats, six more than it now has, when the map is modified. Ontario will have 94 seats (an increase of six), Quebec 73 (one less), British Columbia 27 (four more), Alberta 20 (one more), Newfoundland six (one less), Nova Scotia 10 (one less), Manitoba 12 (one less), Saskatchewan 12 (one less), with New Brunswick staying at 10 Prince Edward Island at four and the Yukon and Northwest Territories at one seat each.

The three most important provinces, Ontario, Quebec and British Columbia will find themselves in the position of electing more than half the Commons — 52 per cent compared to 49 per cent in the present house . . .

A suggestion concerning the decrease of the population of certain provinces has arisen because this decrease has been accompanied by a decrease in immigration. It is generally said that the lower population must be replaced by an increase in the number of immigrants. As if it were possible to get these immigrants by force! If there was, last year for example, a decrease in immigration across all Canada of almost 10 per cent relative to 1969, it's because on the one hand Canada had less need of immigrants and because on the other the supplying countries did not have the desire, or did not feel the necessity, of favoring such immigration. Whatever is said, it's a game with two players.

* * *

On the other hand, it is interesting to note that the proportion of French immigrants to Canada in 1970 represented only two per cent of the total. Some 4,000 French established themselves in Canada last year, 2,826 in Quebec compared with 13,000 West Indians, 9,000 Italians, 8,000 Portugese, 7,000 Greeks, etc.

The greatest number came from Commonwealth countries, 37 per cent. Great Britain and Ireland were first with 28,000. The U.S. followed with 25,000 immigrants.

It is said that the accuracy of computers and statisitcs speaks for itself. If there is a decline in immigration, it can only be assumed that this is the main cause in the population decrease in certain provinces.

Some Tears for the Rich

By RUSSELL BAKER

There was an item in the paper the other day about the passing of the convertible. An open car, it appears, makes no sense anymore even for the rich. On hot days they prefer turning on an air-conditioner to peeling back a roof.

This has something to do with the usually loathsome consistency of the outside air in much of the country, but the more compelling consideration may be the turnpike speeds at which cars commonly travel nowadays. At 70 miles an hour, a ride in an open convertible is something like flying in an open cockpit airplane.

In any event, the convertible, which once played a big part in every boy's dream of the sweet, soft, decadent, sin-ridden life, is about through.

All this, at least, is what the news story said. If you pause long enough to think about it, however, it doesn't really add up. What Detroit is saying is that the convertible doesn't make sense anymore.

The flaw in the explanation is that the convertible never did make any sense. Its design was ridiculously dangerous. Visibility to the rear was poor with the roof up, and the roof was almost always up, either because the mechanism for lowering it was broken, or because the weather was raining or freezing or so hot that the seat cushions could have fried hominy.

* * *

The only justification for a convertible was as pure luxury for persons who enjoyed feeling conspicuous. On that rare day in May when all the elements of the good life were in rare conjunction — the temperature just right, the sun at just the proper intensity of warmth, the woman in the passenger seat of stunning desirability, and the roof-lowering mechanism in one of its infrequent working moods — on such rare days the convertible earned its upkeep, at least for the rich man or the poor foolish Sybarite who owned one.

If the convertible made no sense then, why does it make less sense now?

The true explanation for the decline of the convertible is more interesting and more melancholy. In recent years there have been many related declines and disappearances. The ocean liner, the great hotel, the transcontinental passenger train, among others, have already gone down that road which the convertible is now driving.

* * *

None of them made any sense, at least in the American definition. Profit for the businessman and economy for his client lay in his treating people like cattle and in their persuading themselves that, well, after all, there was something to be said for belonging to a herd.

The result has been the triumph of the airplane, the motel and the air-conditioned-car-bearing turnpike which enables us to roll through the centre of town with the windows sealed so that nobody can hear us baa and moo.

But what is this? somebody will ask. The whinings of one of those Fascist liberal elitists? Does anyone truly think that things were better before herd economics made it possible for every last child in America to travel to Europe overnight and clot the streets of Paris with more blue jeans than flies on a jelly roll?

Not at all, maybe.

The question here is simply, what do the rich get out of being rich anymore? And before anyone writes in to answer "tax loopholes," "invitations to the White House," "medical attention," and so forth — be on notice that all such answers, adding up to the trite statement that the rich get richer, are not to the point. The question is, if you prefer, what do the rich get out of getting richer?

It has always seemed that the chief pleasure of being rich would consist in living in a fashion that made no sense, at least in the American definition. Certainly, this living style would embrace ownership of a convertible, for use on that rare immemorial day in May.

It would also, surely, mean, when visiting another city, not having to stay in some inexpressibly totalitarian motel cell breathing all that tired old used air and trying to get the television set to work, but having an oak-paneled suite in Victorian splendor at an in-town hotel so formidable that touring Presidential candidates would be barred by the doorman and pearls might turn up in the oysters.

Who can possibly care any more about being rich if the day comes, as soon it almost certainly will, when a trip abroad means not a long sea voyage and a tuning down of the nerves, but a cannonball ride in a sealed metal container which hurls you from utter desperation in New York to absolute exhaustion in Rome?

* * *

These decisions to eliminate anything in the world that makes life better must be made by rich people, for rich people are the only kind of people who could possible own airlines, motels, automobile companies and turnpike-building machinery. Why on earth do it? Is it out of simple preference for the herd life? Or is it to keep their profligate children from having anything conspicuous to do? Or could it be that the only thing that is truly any fun any more for the rich man is paying an absurd price for a European painting so that he can make another tax saving, get richer, and sit around complaining to his wife that since they quit making convertibles life isn't any fun any more?

STUDENTS MUST ADJUST—PRINCIPAL

Success Goal of City College

Community colleges must ensure that each student achieves at least a measure of success, even if that means adjusting his original goals, Dr. Grant Fisher, principal of Camosun College, said Thursday.

Fisher was addressing a Rotary Club of Victoria luncheon audience. He said each student who starts a program at a community college should be able to feel he has accomplished something.

It is often the case that the student's original goal — perhaps completion of a university degree — must be altered in order that success is attained, he said.

Fisher outlined the history of the community college concept in the United States and Canada and told of the "upsurge of interest" in the program in B.C.

17,000 ENROLLED

There were 17,000 students enrolled in B.C. community colleges in 1970, he said.

Sixty per cent of those students, he added, were planning to continue university training while the others were involved in career programs.

Fisher said it is essential that a community college offer a comprehensive type of education and not just specialties, which can be learned at institutes of technology and vocational schools.

"The community college came about as the result of social and technological change," he said. "It filled a particular need, the need for equalization of educational opportunities.

"It also filled the need of the population explosion. Since it is hard to accommodate all the students in universities, many can go to community colleges," Fisher said.

TRAINING BEYOND

There is also the need for trained people in our rapidly-advancing technology, for which a large part of the population needs training beyond the high school level," he said.

Fisher in listing the requirements for a successful community college said that it must be comprehensive, have low fees, provide services at a time which is most convenient to the clientele, and must have strong counselling because many people are returning to school after a long period of time."

He said students should be free to choose to continue to university. To aid those requirements the community college needs an active community service program.

MEANS TO END

"The idea of a community college is based on the realist's philosophy of higher education. That is, that education is more than an end to be attained, it is also a means to an end," Fisher said.

"The end is sometimes an occupation, sometimes it is social and occupational mobility," he said.

Fisher said Camosun College plans to offer between 400 and 500 community service courses, along the lines of the previous adult education division of the local school board.

He said Camosun will offer a variety of programs for anyone 18 years or over and that "practically any interest will be served."

In addition to the first two years of university, transfer courses are available to the British Columbia Institute of Technology and other vocational institutions.

"We intend to find new ways of treating college students," he said. "We'll spend a lot of time examining the way things have been done in the past and trying to find better ways."

Camosun opens Sept. 7. About 1,300 students are expected to attend.

Assault on Impaired Driving By Critical Self-Examination

Premier Bennett unofficially endorsed a program Thursday that may make rehabilitation of the drunken driver the business of provincial government.

The program, which would call for "a practical assault on impaired driving", was introduced by the British Columbia Automobile Association during a luncheon at The Empress.

It would call for all those convicted of drunken driving to take part in classroom study as a means of self-examining the dire consequences of slipping behind the wheel after stepping off a barstool.

After viewing a film entitled DWI (Driving While Impaired) Phoenix, the premier apologized for the fact Attorney-General Leslie Peterson was not among the assembled civic and provincial officials.

Then he suggested that association officials present the film to the legislature for viewing at a later time, so that legislation may be passed. He said he favors such a program.

The B.C. Automobile Association borrowed the idea from a community assault against the problem which was first launched in Phoenix, Arizona, and then spread to numerous U.S. areas.

Pointing out that stiffer penalties have not proved to be a deterrent, association officials add that the U.S. program has been highly successful. Latest statistics in Phoenix show that more than 6,000 graduates of the driver rehabilitation course, only 6 per cent, have been arrested a second time for impaired driving.

Power to Axe Zoning 'Dangerous'

The B.C. municipal affairs minister's power to reverse regional government zoning decisions is more dangerous than the health minister's power to licence doctors, Victoria council was told Thursday.

Ald. Peter Pollen made the comment while introducing a motion to petition the government to change the B.C. Municipal Act to remove the special power.

Pollen said the possibility of "political patronage . . . is extremely dangerous" because of the law passed at the last session of the B.C. legislature.

Council accepted the motion and will also try to put the matter up for debate and adoption at the next convention of the Union of B.C. Municipalities here in September.

The law gave municipal affairs minister Dan Campbell the power to simply overrule regional governments on certain zoning decisions.

Pollen said that besides the possibility of patronage, it is also a dangerous precedent to allow a provincial government to make decisions at a local level over the heads of those given the initial responsibility — much more so, he said, than the recent orders-in-council that gave the health minister the right to overrule hospitals' decisions on hiring doctors.

HUMANITARIAN ACTS 'OUTRANK POLITICS'

Humanitarian acts should be valued more than political leanings when a man is remembered by his country, Ald. Peter Pollen suggested Thursday.

Pollen made the observation as he asked council to dedicate a pocket park at the Oak Bay junction to late Canadian-born physician Dr. Norman Bethune.

Bethune, he recalled, devoted his life to care of the Chinese Communists, and became a national hero in that country.

But, "for all his political limitations, he was a great humanitarian," said Pollen.

Pollen claimed a part in dedicating the park because he was involved in negotiating for the land from an oil company.

What Natives Need Is Pipeline: Fighting Brunette

Don Peacock, managing editor of the Calgary Albertan, recently visited the Arctic to see what was being done by government and others to meet problems of oil and gas pipelines which have been proposed to bring northern resources south. Here, he reports on the possible implications for the native northerner.*

By DON PEACOCK

NORMAN WELLS, N.W.T. — When she speaks of the natives of the Canadian Arctic, her brown eyes sometimes flash with feeling, as though she were angry about something indefinable.

"The tweedies, we call them, these do-gooders who come up here from the south," she says with contempt. "A do-gooder in the North is useless. We wish they'd all go to hell in the south and stay there."

Pat Carney, the striking brunette former Vancouver Sun business columnist, is speaking from years of experience in the Arctic, first as journalist for newspapers, magazines and television, now as a resident consultant on native attitudes for the Gas Arctic Systems Study Group.

Very well, a visiting journalist from Minneapolis says: If she isn't up here as a do-gooder, how come she talks the way she does?

Outdoor Museum

"These people as Canadians are entitled to the same standards as other Candians in housing, food, health, education and jobs," she replies. "Some people would like to keep them on the land as they've always been and make the whole north a kind of outdoors museum. But nobody wants to live on $600 a year if they don't have to."

This and more she said in a long discussion with a group of visiting journalists in Yellowknife the night before.

Now she is running across the tarmac of the airport here, leaning against a 50-mile-an-hour crosswind that nearly kept the twin-turbo Fairchild F27 from landing. The rain is soaking her short dark hair. The August temperature is in the 40s.

She is wearing a stylish but serviceable blue denim pants suit, possibly thermal underwear underneath and blue tennis shoes. Against the cold rain she has put on a light ski jacket. Her luggage is light, but includes a heavy pair of lace-up rubber boots and a down-filled sleeping bag.

U.S. Markets

She and a young economist who works for her consulting firm of Gemini North have flown up from Yellowknife with the journalists touring the area as guests of her client, one of three groups of Canadian and American companies hoping to build a natural gas pipeline down from Prudhoe Bay, Alaska, to markets in the United States.

They are looking for transportation into native settlements along the Mackenzie River route the pipeline would take. The weather doesn't look good for flying, and there are whitecaps on the Mackenzie half a mile away that would swamp any small boat.

Polite Bristles

She bristles politely at any suggestion that she may compromise her principles in the interests of her pipeliner-clients.

"The pipeline can be to the north what the railway was to Confederation," she says, "because inevitably it will develop an economic infrastructure that doesn't exist now."

"We need to make this colony (the northern territories) self-governing," she says. For that, three conditions are essential: the native people have to be taught how to run their own local governments; an infrastructure of new roads, community services, potential tourist facilities is required, and a private sector of the northern economy is needed as a balance against the government welfare state that currently exists here.

Economic Base

The pipeline through the area would bring in a billion dollars in new ancillary investment. The new economic base this would establish would remain when the construction crews left.

But Miss Carney has her worries about the impact, just the same. The pipeliners were going to use existing settlements as their bases of operations. The outsiders would've to integrate with those communities and "this is a very fragile civilization."

She speaks of the tragically excessive drinking that goes on in many native settlements and how projects intended to improve active life can sometimes have totally unexpected adverse results.

A year ago or so, the federal government had shipped houses into a certain settlement and made them available to the native residents at subsidized prices they could readily afford.

That was good. But living in the new houses was so much more comfortable than going out into the Arctic woods when winter came to Trap that most of the men stayed home instead. With nothing else to do, they began to drink heavily, and that was bad.

Existing Structure

Economic development would be fatal if it smashed the existing structure," Miss Carney says. "But economic development that upgrades the existing structure is something else. The alternative to doing this is to do nothing."

Is Miss Carney threatening to sound too negative? Gordon Walker, the bear-like vice-president of Alberta Gas Trunk Line Co. Ltd., stir uneasily in his chair on the edge of the group in Miss Carney's air-conditioned Yellowknife office.

His is the operating company of Gas Arctic, which has hired Miss Carney's firm as part of a total research program that will probably run to more than $10 million before it's finished. Gas Arctic has taken pains to ensure that its consultants on sociological and economic problems, like Miss Carney, and on ecology and other environmental problems can be proven to be independent, their findings — favorable or otherwise to the proposed pipeline — unfettered by any company censorship.

"It's become essential to the economics of pipelining in the Arctic," he says, "to understand the sociological, ecological and political problems. That's why we have hired Gemini North. I think we have learned that you really can't successfully build a pipeline just with engineering. You have to make it socially acceptable, too."

He points out that Gas Arctic has been training 15 native northerners since last January in what is to be a three-year program at Rocky Mountain House, a relatively isolated area of Alberta.

Isolated Area

They would be skilled pipeline technicians when they were finished. It was hoped they would provide a nucleus of supervisory workers on the Arctic pipeline, although they were free to work on Alberta sections of Alberta Gas Trunk if they preferred.

Walker said these northerners, although most had to be taught even to drive a truck, had come along faster and more successfully than the company had anticipated. Some were now getting on-the-job training in actual pipeline work on the company's Alberta sections.

But even the word pipeline is still a strange and mysterious thing in some of the settlements, and few of the native people know or care that three different groups are competing to build it. Still, say Miss Carney and Walker, they have a capacity to learn and adapt, if they are understood and given a chance.

Some of the northerners who have picked up pipelining skills so fast at Rocky Mountain House arrived thinking Alberta Gas Trunk Line kept gas stored in many trunks in Alberta. Television reaching into some residents can't teach the residents everything.

Farm Act Called 'Curse'

By ROD EDWARDS

REGINA (CP) — The Family Farm Protection Act has been called an unnecessary piece of socialist legislation and a curse on those it is intended to help.

It also has been praised as the savior of farmers in their hour of need.

These divergent views of the bill ignited the most prolonged and sometimes vehement debate of the special summer session of the Saskatchewan legislature which adjourned Wednesday to an unspecified date.

The bill gives farmers a year's holiday from paying their debts on machinery, livestock and land. It is designed to free money for essential expenses faced by farmers who have been hard-pressed to meet their commitments.

Most of the opposition to the bill, which is effective from July 31 this year to Aug. 1 next, has been on the contention that it will result in a drying up of credit to small farmers and a crushing financial blow to implement dealers. Abuses also are predicted.

LIBERALS OPPOSED BILL

The Liberal Opposition, which made many attempts to stall the bill in second reading and was voted down on its amendment to refer the bill to committee for public hearings, said the legislation was unnecessary because it was just an extension of acts now in force.

The New Democratic Party government maintained it was necessary to give "breathing space" to farmers who are in serious financial plight with harvest fast approaching.

Instead of suspending debt payments for a year, the Liberals said the government could accomplish the same thing by guaranteeing loans to farmers.

But "the NDP government is not prepared to put up one plugged nickle to save the family farm," said Deputy Liberal Leader David Boldt.

"The facts will be proven in a matter of months that the NDP are not the friend of the farmer. . . . The NDP are a socialist labor government and no supporter of that free enterpriser called the farmer."

Lending institutions and farm implement dealers were concerned over the economic effects of the bill.

CITES MAIN PROBLEM

"The major problem of a bill of this kind is that it creates an unfavorable environment for all lending institutions, primarily because there is not and cannot be any assurance that the July 31, 1972, date will not be extended," said a telegram to the government from the Canadian Farm and Industrial Equipment Institute.

"Consequently, credit grantors are forced to make determinations as to whether they undertake future business of lending or financing in the province."

The Saskatchewan-Manitoba Implement Dealers Association attacked the bill for not providing compensation to dealers for additional financial losses.

The association said a farmer could delay payments long enough to make a repossessed and reconditioned piece of equipment unsaleable. It is possible, the brief said, for the farmer to escape repossession on a harvester bought on time payments in 1971 until after the harvest in 1973.

MORE THAN 2,000 members of the Ladies Garment Workers Union marched in Montreal Thursday protesting federal tariff regulation regulations which allow cheap imports into Canada. The marchers blocked traffic and hindered pedestrians in their slow walk to the federal industry, trade and commerce offices in downtown Montreal. (CP Wirephoto)

Good News Is Any News . . . In Ottawa

By STEWART MacLEOD

OTTAWA (CP) — If publicity-conscious politicians were on the ball, they would be in Ottawa once a week during the summer doldrums to denounce somebody. In fact, there is even good mileage nowadays in praising somebody.

Apart from, say, a cabinet shuffle or garbage strike, things are so quiet in Ottawa that any public utterances by any politician become the highlight of the day.

When David MacDonald (PC — Egmont) issued a statement this week calling for the formation of a Commons committee on youth, his suggestion was reported all across Canada. Had he said this during a busy day in the Commons, he'd be lucky to get any attention at all.

Northern Development Minister Jean Chretien, who recently visited Siberia, held his second news conference since returning to Canada and he appeared amazed when some 35 reporters crowded into his office. Re-runs like this are generally non-events, but Mr. Chretien couldn't have done much better with a moon walk.

MASSIVE EVENT

Prime Minister Trudeau's cabinet appointments this week, of course, was a massive event for reporters. Not since he shattered the summer with a 90-minute general news conference — his first in Ottawa in 19 months had there been so much excitement.

Even if John Diefenbaker called a news conference to announce he planned to vote Conservative in the next election he would likely have a sellout audience.

On particularly bad days even press gallery mail is read avidly. A New York public relations man, obviously aware of the doldrum days, sent the exciting word that one of the world's greatest experts on hot dogs would soon be visiting Ottawa.

ITT OFFICIALS DENY SHARE-SELLING CHARGE

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The Post-Dispatch said Thursday it had learned that several high-ranking executives of International Telephone and Telegraph Corp. sold ITT stock shortly before the United States government imposed an anti-trust settlement on the company July 31 that sharply lowered the value of the stock.

A report from the newspaper's Washington bureau says the executives "were able to avoid personal losses of about $86,500 by selling their holdings to buyers who were unaware that the department of justice was about to force ITT to get rid of $1 billion in assets."

The executives disposed of stock valued at $766,568.

Regulations of the securities and exchange commission and the New York exchange forbid corporate executives from buying or selling stock on the basis of information not known generally by the public.

BUSINESS AND FINANCE

Y and R

Toronto-based Y and R Properties, Ltd. made slightly more net income in the first half, although gross revenue was up substantially from $3.84 million to $5.5 million.

Inflation continues as a problem in the recovery of the real estate sector of the economy, but higher interest rates confirm a recovery is taking place, the company said.

Whether the market can absorb the large quantity of office space that will be available in 1972 in Metro Toronto depends on how fast recovery occurs, said president Kenneth Rotenberg.

McD-Douglas

Officials of the aerospace firm report next year should show a favorable turnaround in profits because of increased delivery of its new DC-10 jumbo jets.

Second-quarter sales were reported at $451.8 million and earnings of 63 cents a share. This compared with 1970 $599.2 million in sales and 81 cents in earnings.

Six-month sales this year were $55.7 million ($1.2 billion).

Trading Surplus

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's balance-of-payments surplus stood at $220 million at mid-year after a marked contraction in April, May and June, Statistics Canada said today.

Last year, when Canada piled up an unusually large surplus of $1,297 million, the mid-year surplus was $307 million.

The statistics bureau said Canada's commodity trade surplus continued strong in the second quarter of 1971. But a larger deficit in non-commodity trade and a lowering of the exceptionally high value of the Canadian dollar in international exchange markets in June, cut into the over-all surplus.

The balance-of-payments surplus for April, May and June was $78 million, compared with a surplus of $142 million in the first quarter of 1971 and a surplus of $252 million in April, May and June of last year.

The commodity trade surplus in the second quarter of 1971 was $559 million, on exports of $4,688 million and imports of $4,129 million. This surplus compared with one of $650 million in the second quarter of 1970, and one of $700 million in the first three months of 1971.

There was a $481 million deficit in non-merchandise transactions between Canada and other countries in April, May and June this year. This compared with a $558 million deficit in the first three months of 1971 and a deficit of $398 million in April, May and June, 1970.

Traditionally, Canada runs a deficit on its international balance of payments. Whatever surplus is achieved on commodity exports over commodity imports is usually more than offset by heavy payments abroad for services, such as freight, insurance, travel, and interest and dividends on foreign investment.

However, for the last 18 months, Canada has run a big commodity trade surplus, resulting in an over-all balance-of-payments surplus. Exports to Europe, in particular, have been booming, while Canadian purchases from the United Stateas last year showed slow growth because of an economic slow-down.

Transocean

Revenues and earnings of Transocean Oil Inc., of Houston, rose in the quarter ended June 30 compared with a year ago.

The company reports $3.39 million revenue, up from $2.39 million, with earnings of $1.38 million (11 cents a share) vs. $1.17 million (11 cents). More shares were outstanding this year.

Five of nine wells drilled in the period were successful oil or gas producers.

Sukunka

Previously-reported agreements to develop the Sukunka River coal fields through a joint undertaking have now been completed, according to Brameda Resources Ltd., Teck Corp. and Mikas Oil Co. Ltd.

The fourth participant is Coalition Mining Ltd., which is a Mikas subsidiary and is financing the diamond drill, percussion drill, surface exposure and tunnelling program estimated at $1.5 million.

Money Market Feels Pinch

OTTAWA (CP) — Money markets were pinched in places this week and some investment dealers had to turn to the Bank of Canada for the second week running to get short-term cash at penalty interest rates.

Weekly statistics issued Thursday night by the Bank of Canada show short-term interest rates at their highest in six months.

There are new signs that the Bank of Canada is applying the brakes on the sharp expansion of money supply that has prevailed for about a year.

Investment dealers short of cash to finance inventories of securities owed the central bank about $14 million Wednesday night on short-term advances arranged on bankers' notes and government securities.

That was an increase of $4.5 million in a week, but down from the heavy maximum of $125 million in such drawings reached between July 29 and Aug. 4.

To finance inventories with day loans from the chartered banks, investment dealers had to pay an average of 4.1 per cent during the week to Wednesday, the highest since February and up sharply from a low of 2.19 at the end of May.

HIT HIGH POINTS

Average rates on government treasury bills auctioned Thursday also hit the highest points since February. The rate on three-month bills was 4.01 per cent, up from 3.88 a week earlier and a low of 2.96 in May.

Six-month bills drew 4.27 per cent, up from 4.10 a week earlier and the low of 3.13 at the end of April.

Chartered-bank holdings of treasury bills were down by $36 million in a week to $2,727 million before Thursday's auction — a decline of $123 million from the peak of $2,850 million eight weeks earlier.

The cushion in chartered bank reserves between actual holdings and the increased requirements for August remained narrow compared to performance in July.

Monthy figures, adjusted to discount seasonal variations, showed an easing in the growth of money supply.

Total currency in circulation and bank deposits advanced in July by $127 million to $33,374 million, the smallest increase in a year.

More narrowly defined to include only circulating currency and demand deposits in banks, money supply declined last month by $117 million to $10,231 milllion — the first decline of that magnitude since early 1969.

West Coast Probe Follows Suspension

VANCOUVER (CP) — The chief auditor of the national contingency fund arrived from Toronto Thursday and went to work in the office of West Coast Securities Ltd.

The fund contains about $1.5 million and is set up to compensate clients of a broker or investment dealer if they suffer loss by failure of the broker to meet his liabilities.

West Coast Securities had its trading privileges suspended Wednesday by the Vancouver Stock Exchange when it found itself in difficulty resulting from trade in the shares of Freehold Gas and Oil Ltd.

SUSPENDED

On Thursday, the Toronto Stock Exchange suspended the trading privileges of Malone, Lynch Securities Ltd., a broker member of that exchange and asked that an interim receiver be appointed to take over management of its affairs. The Toronto Exchange notified the national contingency fund of its action against the broker.

West Coast Securities is understood to have been suspended because of delay in clearing transactions in Freehold. This delay was attributed by West Coast to the eastern broker.

J. A. Van Luven, president of the Vancouver exchange, reported that Malone, Lynch had failed to pick up bank drafts which were drawn to cover payment for stock purchases.

Meanwhile, Freehold closed at .56 cent on the Vancouver exchange Thursday, down .15 cent from Wednesday. Last week it reached a top of $3.20 and in the past two weeks has traded close to three million shares.

Van Luven said the exchange is continuing an examination with the trading pattern of Freehold being studied, as well as the financial situation of West Coast.

On Wednesday, Van Luven said the situation "created working capital problems for West Coast but the company is by no means insolvent."

The national contingency fund was set up in 1969 by members of the Toronto, Montreal and Vancouver stock exchanges and the Investment Dealers Association to protect the public from defaults.

U.S. Wants Easing Of Limits

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — The United States has formally proposed to the International Monetary Fund that there should be a widening of the margins within which currencies may fluctuate around their fixed parties, reliable financial sources said Thursday.

The proposal, made by U.S. chief delegate to the IMF, William Dale, called for a widening of the exchange-rate bands to three per cent on either side of parity, instead of the present one-per-cent margin, the sources said.

●

Disclosure of the U.S. move came as European currencies rose steeply against the dollar in continuing speculative turmoil on foreign exhange markets.

Wider currency bands would cushion the monetary reserves of leading industrial countries from the impact to volatile exchange market movements in responnse to speculation.

Under present international monetary rules, central banks must spend reserves to keep their currencies from falling below a floor of one per cent under parity by selling dollars in the open market.

Also, they must take in dollars by selling local currency to prevent the rate from going through its official ceiling.

Twighlight Bid for Gold Ends Best-Ever Effort

CALI, Colombia (CP) — The sixth Pan American Games, the most successful yet for Canada, end in tropical twilight today with the favored equestrian team jumping for gold on Friday the 13th.

A Toronto stockbroker and a refrigeration equipment distributor join with a cost accountant and a former champion figure skater over the difficult jumps to challenge for the last gold medal of the 194 awarded in 20 sports the last two weeks.

Then in the closing ceremony the flaming torch atop Pascual Guerrero Stadium will be doused after a token force of the 3,000 athletes from 30 countries who competed make the traditional game-ending parade.

The Canadian equestrians already have made their best showing ever in major international competition, winning three of five gold medals and a silver and bronze. Now it's the jumping team's turn.

Tom Gayford of Gormley, Ont., 43-year-old stockbroker, still is looking for his first medal. Jim Elder, 37-year-old equipment distributor, lacks a medal, too. The cost accountant, Torchy Millar of Ste. Marguerite Station, Que., won an individual jumping bronze, and ex-figure skater Barbara Simpson of Calgary missed one in the same even.

The pickings were slim for Canada on the next-to-last day of the Games Thursday, just one bronze in field hockey. But the Canadian team of 312 athletes goes home with more gold won than any other from Canada in this quadrennial hemispheric show's 20-year history.

As host country four years ago in Winnipeg, Canada won more medals than in Cali but less gold, and it really is the gold column that counts.

The Canadians equalled their best post-war showing anywhere, but still finished third in the over-all standing as fast-coming Cuba showed a vast improvement over its Winnipeg performance and finished second, a spot Canada held in Winnipeg.

Canada has 80 medals: 18 gold, 20 silver and 42 bronze.

The United States, which didn't send an equestrian team, completed its medal chase with its first cycling gold ever in the Games Thursday and won the over-all team title with 105 gold, 73 silver and 40 bronze—a 218 total.

The Cubans embarrassed the U.S. no end by winning the baseball gold medal and took away other golds in events dominated by the Americans since the first Games in 1951.

Cuba won 30 gold, 50 silver and 26 bronze—a total of 106.

In replacing Canada as the chief Yankee chaser in the Games, Cuba unveiled a world record triple jumper in Pedro Perez, whose leap of 57 feet one inch was the only world mark broken in the track and field competition.

The Canadian feminine stars fought the American girls to a stand-off in track and field, each with five gold. Six Canadian gold came in swimming, compared with three at Winnipeg, and Canadian girls ended U.S. diving supremacy by winning both the springboard and tower diving championships.

The three Canadian equestrian golds were in the Three-Day Event team competition and the individual and team dressage events, with Christilot Hanson of Sharon, Ont., winning two gold in dressage.

Other Canadian gold medals were in cycling and weightlifting.

ARGENTINA UNBEATEN

The bronze taken by the field hockey team was the first medal in international competition. The British Columbia squad played off against Chile for third place and won 1-0 on a goal by fullback Lee Wright of Vancouver. Argentina, unbeaten throughout the tournament, defeated Mexico 1-0 for the gold medal.

Brazil took both basketball gold medals.

Petite Mem Does It! But Arguments Go On

By BILL WALKER

Well, the arguments should be in full swing along shedrow at Sandown Park today.

Because now there is added fuel for thought.

The issue at stake before Thursday's eighth race, was, as it mostly is at such combined Quarter Horse and Thoroughbred race meetings, can a Thoroughbred beat a Quarter Horse in spring events?

The answer generally, was "not often" or "very rarely."

Danny Hajnal, general manager of the Sandown meeting, has long held that in "no way could this happen."

Jockey Jack Palmer on the other hand, recalled that once he rode a thoroughbred that could stick it to the Quarter Horses.

"But there aren't too many," he quietly suggested.

And many others took sides. It is thought too there was some private wagering.

"I heard some talk," Palmer admitted.

TOOK QUICK LEAD

About four jumps after the start; it was Petite Mem moving away from Bob's Deequest. About eight jumps later, the margin of superiority was beginning to lengthen. Before the horses reached the Oak Tree, Petite Mem was long gone and was still well on top at the finish. Royal Living, running from the No. 1 hole, finished second, and Bob's Deequest, third.

It had been no contest on this day.

But was Petite Mem that good? Could she win sprinting at shorter against the Quarter Horses? Were there quicker Quarter Horses in the barn?

INTERESTING THOUGHT

"It would be interesting; I would say that," said Palmer, who Thursday rode the four-year old chestnut mare to victory, of the possibility of Petite Mem running shorter, say 400 yards, against some of the best on the grounds.

"She might have a good chance in an open heat," he added. "But I wouldn't bet on it," he laughed.

"Today, she broke running," he added, "not normally like a Thoroughbred. "I knew I had to beat the three horse (Bob's Deequest), to the turn, and after the first jump or two, I knew I could do it," he said.

DANNY ENJOYS CROW

An oddity of the occasion was the fact that Hajnal while eating crow, was forced to enjoy it.

Because, you see, he is part owner of Petite Mem, and got the winner's share of the pot. Petite Mem paid $3.70.

Meanwhile, Desie Star pulled a mild surprise in the Quarter Horse Championship event with a half-length victory over Rain Allie, to return $9.90.

Jayie and The Greeter combined for a $48.60 exacta the sixth, and Molly Gay was an upset winner in the fourth to return $32.40, the best price of the day.

Jockey Kerry Sam was thrown from his mount Swell Deal during the running of the third race. Preliminary reports said he suffered nothing more than a sprained ankle.

Jockey Howard Gray had three wins, Sweet Command ($8.10), Desie Star, and Trusteen ($5.10).

GET FIVE PLAYERS . . . . . FOR MILES, RIDDELL

Cats Trade With Kings

Victoria Cougars announced Thursday that Chris Riddell and Lon Miles have been sent to the Edmonton Oil Kings in a Western Canada Hockey League trade that brings five players to the Cats.

In exchange, the WCHL champion Oil Kings will send goalkeeper Brian Newbert, defencemen Dave Okranic and Jan Kascak, forward Phil Blake and a player to be named by Oct. 1.

Blake, a past figure-skaiting star, started his hockey career in the Victoria Minor Association and played with the Racquet Club midgets the season before going to Edmonton. He played last season with Edmonton Maple Leafs, the Oil King's farm club.

A small but solid forward, Blake is an outstanding skater. He was rated the fastest and figures to be a big asset to the Cougars in their first WCHL season.

Newbert is another graduate of the Victoria minor leagues. He played his first hockey in Memorial Arena at age seven and was with the Oil Kings' juvenile team last year. He was called up for the goalkeeping job in one WCHL game last season and allowed only one goal as Oil Kings won.

Okranic, a 180-pound defenceman, won a spot in training camp with the Oil Kngs last year but returned to Fort St. John prior to regular season play when he got homesick. Kascak is from Penticton where he played last year.

Victoria manager Eric Bishop said age was a determining factor in the trade. At 19, Newbert is the eldest of the five. Blake is 18 and Okranic and Kascak are both 17. Bishop said the Cougars are looking to the future in their trades.

In trading Riddell and Miles, Cougars gave up two of their better players of last season. Riddell finished fourth in the B.C. Junior Hockey League points race with 36 goals and 61 assists. Miles had 26 goals and 20 assists. At 19 years of age, both players would be in their last season of junior hockey this year.

Argos Stun Alouettes; Cahill Lauds Defence

MONTREAL (CP) — An offence that exploded for three long touchdowns and a defensive corps that, in the words of their coach, "played like wildmen," combined to carry Toronto Argonauts to a 26-14 win over Montreal Alouettes Thursday night.

The quarterbacking duo of Joe Theismann and Greg Barton directed Toronto to a net offence of 477 yards for the Argos' third consecutive win and sole possession of first place in the Eastern Football Conference.

Although the Argonauts were not able to mount consistent offensive drives, their ability to break loose for long gains from their own end of the field proved the key factor.

Rookie speedster Leon McQuay picked up his fifth touchdown in three games in the first quarter as he broke loose from the Toronto 29 and outraced his Alouette pursuers to the end zone.

12-44	Punts/average	12-45
0-0	Fumbles/lost	3/2
9-70	Penalties/yards	11-80

An 84-yard run by Theismann on a quarterback draw in the third quarter and a 94-yard pass-and-run effort from Theismann to Dave Cranmer provided the Argonauts with their other touchdowns.

Montreal's only touchdown came in the fourth quarter when Sonny Wade connected with Tom Pullen on a 14-yard pass. The convert by George Springate, a single by Wade and two field goals by Justin Canale rounded out the Alouette scoring.

Ivan MacMillan booted a field goal and a single and Zenon Andrusyshyn added another single for the Argos.

"Those guys played like wildmen," he told reporters. "The defence was the key to our success."

Roy Smith Third In Close Finish

LANGLEY — Rick Henderson of Concord, Calif., won the second of a series of five races here Thursday night in the $17,600 International Drivers' Challenge series for super-modifieds and sprint cars.

Henderson, who was forced out by fire in the series opener at Western Speedway Wednesday, beat Ed Hopper of San Jose, Calif., by two car lengths Thursday. Roy Smith of Victoria finished third, another car-length behind.

The final three races in the Drivers' Challenge will be held in Washington state. Third race is at Skagit tonight, fourth at Sky Valley on Saturday and the final goes at Spanaway on Sunday. Top driver in the second-annual event will win $1,000.

Rosewall Can Rest Before Big Battle

TORONTO (CP) — Australian Ken Rosewall has today off to savor his hard-fought 7-6, 2-6, 6-4 win over third-seeded Cliff Drysdale Thursday night in the $70,000 Canadian open tennis championships.

The rare off-day will help him rest before meeting top-seeded John Newcombe, the Wimbledon king who downed seventh seeded Marty Riessen of Evanston, Ill., 6-4, 7-5 in another tough quarter-final.

Semi-finals of the men's singles will be played Saturday. The final, paying $10,000 to the winner and $5,000 to the loser, is set for Sunday.

The pace told on both Drysdale and Rosewall as they struggled through a match that took two hours and 15 minutes. Both were involved in later doubles matches and both were losers.

The seeded women made short work of their opponents, however, as second-seeded Rosemary Casals and fourth-seeded Francoise Durr recorded straight-set victories to face each other in weekend semi-final play.

Miss Casals eliminated Valerie Ziegenfuss 6-3, 6-3 in a battle of San Franciscans. Miss Durr, ninth-ranked woman in the world, stopped Peaces Bartkowicz of Detroit 6-2, 6-3.

BLAKELY, GIVAN CLASH IN SENIOR GOLF FINAL

It was a battle between two former champions from the United States as Bill Blakely of Portland and Seattle's Harry Givan started today in the 18-hole final of the 40th annual Seniors' North West Golf Association tournament at Victoria Golf Club.

Givan, beaten by Victoria's Bill Thompson in last year's final, eliminated Max Hunter of Olympia Thursday, 4 and 3, in a semi-final match. Thompson was eliminated by Givan in the quarter-final series on Tuesday.

CHURSKY GUARDS . . . . . VANCOUVER GOAL

Spartans Test Royals

Victoria Royals, runaway leaders of the Western Canada Soccer League coastal division, will make their final home appearance of the regular season Saturday when they meet Vancouver Spartans at Royal Athletic Park.

With Edmonton Eagles of the WCSL prairie division conceding points to Royals and Spartans last weekend by cancelling their coast visit, the Victoria club now has 18 points while Vancouver has six.

The defending league champion Royals remain the only undefeated club in the WCSL. In previous games against Spartans, the local side has won four and tied two.

The Spartans insist they are a much-improved side and will be out for revenge in Saturday's match here. Aiding the cause is Tony Chursky, one of the most promising goaltenders to show in many years.

A regular with Spartans this season, the 18-year-old Chursky broke into senior soccer last year with Croatia of the Pacific Coast League. The youngster was so impressive that Spartans wasted little time signing him for the summer circuit.

"He's one of the best young goalkeepers to come along for quite some time, said Spartan's secretary John Pickburn. "He'll be No. 1 with us for a long time."

Game time Saturday is 7:15 p.m.

OAKFIELD, N.S. (CP) — Bert Ticehurst, although not pleased with his second-round performance, holds a two-stroke lead with two rounds remaining in the Canadian amateur golf championship.

"I'm a little unhappy," the 41-year-old Vancouver golfer said Thursday after shooting a one-over-par 74 to give him a 36-hole total of 145 and the lead over four golfers tied at 147.

". . . Too many three putts," he said after three-putting three of the last four greens.

Ticehurst handled the par 36 front nine in regulation but he nearly missed on the par four ninth.

A member of the Willington Cup winning British Columbia team, Ticehurst shanked his approach shot on to the adjoining first fairway. It took a chip shot past a clump of trees and a downhill 25-foot putt to salvage his par.

John Sale of Calais, Me. had a good opportunity for a share of the lead. He shot a two-under 71 and finished tied with Dick Siderowf of Easton, Conn., Jimmy Wittenberg of Memphis, Tenn., and Andre Gagne of Boischatel, Que., at 147.

HAD BAD 18TH

Going into the final hole, Sale was four strokes under par. A disastrous effort on the 18th green added two strokes to his game.

He put his tee shot on the 18th just in front of a small tree near the centre of the fairway. The tree obstructed his swing and the approach shot went to the back of the green, some 80 feet from the pin.

Sale was short on the first putt. The second also failed.

Tom Henry of Peterborough, Ont., George Haines of Bernardsvill, N.J., and Michael Sanger of Greenwich, Conn., all had 148 counts. Henry and Sanger both hot second round 74s while Haines had a 75.

The field was cut to the top 60 and ties after the second round, leaving 65 golfers with scores of 58 or less in contention for the Earl Grey Cup.

MICK MISSES CUT

Among those who failed to make the cut was Dave Mick, the Victoria youngster who registered a four-under-par 142 in leading British Columbia to victory Monday and Tuesday in the 36-hole Willingdon Cup team competition. Mick again ran into trouble Thursday, adding an 83 to his first-round 82 for a total of 165.

Interesting Things Happen Behind the Soaring Birds

By The Associated Press

Baltimore Orioles, leading the American League's East Division by a comfortable eight games, might be tempted to take a peek over their shoulders. There are interesting things going on back there.

For example, Detroit's Mickey Lolich, hidden by the Vida Blue excitement all season, is on the threshold of 20 victories for the Tigers.

New York Yankees are enjoying the best record in the division since the all-star break with a 19-11 log that has them two games over .500 for the first time all year.

But the Orioles, unconcerned by the shenanigans behind them, whipped Minnesota Twins 8-2 Thursday night to maintain their AL East lead. Detroit took over second place with a 4-3 decision over Milwaukee Brewers—Lolich's 19th victory of the season. The Yankees made it eight victories in the last 10 games by sweeping a doubleheader from California Angeles 3-0 and 2-1 with the second game going 11 innings.

In other AL action, Oakland Athletics walloped Boston Red Sox 6-2 and Kansas City Royals split a doubleheader at Washington, winning the first game 2-0 but dropping the nightcap 2-1.

SWEEP SERIES

The Orioles jumped on Minnesota's Jim Kaat for three runs before a man was retired in the first inning and coasted over the Twins for a sweep of their three-game series.

Lolich pitched a six-hitter and the Tigers broke a tie in the eighth inning with Bill Freehan's triple the big blow to beat Milwaukee. The victory was the Tigers' 13th in the last 17 games and left Lolich with a 19-8 record.

Mike Kekich limited California to four hits in 11 innings and Bobby Murcer's two-out, two-strike single drove in New York's winning run in the second game of the doubleheader.

Bert Campaneris ripped three singles, driving in two runs and scoring two as Oakland whacked Boston, completing a sweep of their series and tumbling the Red Sox to third place in the East.

San Francisco Giants, who have had a hard time beating anyone recently, took a day off and let Los Angeles Dodgers beat themselves for a change.

It was a lift for their spirits, to say nothing of their lead in the National League West.

While the Giants didn't play, they improved their lead to four games over Los Angeles when the Dodgers fumbled over a 3-1, 13-inning loss to Philadelphia Phillies Thursday night.

The Los Angeles' loss was good news to San Francisco, which had lost eight of 10 games and wasted most of a 10-game lead to the hot Dodgers.

Only three other games were played in the National League Thursday night as Atlanta Braves crushed Houston Astros 10-5, St. Louis Cardinals nipped Pittsburgh Pirates 3-2 and San Diego Padres turned back New York Mets 3-0.

Marlene Gains One-Shot Lead

WEST VANCOUVER (CP) — A one-under-par 73 gave Marlene Streit a one-stroke lead over her two nearest competitors for the Canadian women's amateur golf championship as play entered the third of four rounds today.

Mrs. Streit, from Fonthill, Ont., parred each of the first nine holes Thursday, then broke par on the back nine with an eagle on the 15th for a two-round total of 149 on the 6,119-yard Capilano course.

Jo Ann Washam of Auburn, Wash., and Jocelyne Bourassa of Shawinigan, Que., were second with 150.

British Columbia scored a team total of 459 to take the interprovincial team championship phase of the tournament, one stroke ahead of Ontario. Alberta was third with 478 in the 36-hole tournament.

Mrs. Streit has won the women's title nine times.

ALSO BROKE PAR

Also in contention for the title were Cheran Gerber of South Africa and Gail Moore of Vancouver, both with 152.

Miss Gerber was the only other golfer besides Mrs. Streit to break par in the tournament to date. She shot 39 on the front nine and chipped in on the 10th for an eagle three to return in a one-under-par 36.

Mrs. Moore, defending national champion, had 76 on both her first two rounds.

Toronto's Liz Daniel lost her first-round lead with a 78 Thursday for two-round 153. Gayle Borthwick also had 153.

Two other Victorians qualified for today's final round. Shirley Naysmith fired an 84 Thursday for 173 and Jeannie Hopps posted an 85 for 171. Missing the cut was Nita Moody of Victoria, with a tally of 188.

Winless Schlee Starts With Six-Under-Par 66

SUTTON, Mass. (AP) — John Schlee, winless in five years on the professional golf tour, nursed a slim lead today entering the second round of the $165,000 Massachusetts Classic.

Schlee, 32, fashioned a six-under-par 34-32—66 Thursday in the first round of the 72-hole tournament at 7,212-yard Pleasant Valley Country Club.

Schlee had seven birdies and went one over par once in launching a bid for his first tour victory. The Professional Golfers Association Rookie of the Year in 1966, his best showing was a second-place finish in the St. Paul Open that season.

Schlee moved into a one-stroke lead over Tom Weiskopf, the Kemper Open champion who had a 34-33—67 in the morning before the rain-soaked layout dried under a hot sun.

DeWitt Weaver was alone with 68, but Bobby Mitchell, Lou Graham, Joel Goldstrand, Rod Funseth, Bert Weaver and Ray Floyd were just another stroke back at 69.

The contest was played in preparation for upcoming B.C. playoff games for both clubs.

Pitcher's Double Cracks Deadlock

Wade Burns pitched a four-hitter and drove in the winning run Thursday in Langford Drywall's 6-5 victory over Centry Inn in the first game of the best-of-five Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League semi-final series at Heywood Avenue Park.

Sparked by Cec Ferguson's two-run homer, Langford took a 4-0 lead in the second inning, but Century's Don Frampton struck back with another two-run homer in the fourth frame. A three-run outburst by the innkeepers in the sixth tied the score.

The victory gave Langford a 1-0 series lead. Bell's Men's Wear and Colwood Inn meet tonight for the first game of the other semi-final at Heywood.

Collapse of Cup Project Bitter Blow

This week's announcement that there will be no Canadian 12-metre entry in the 1974 America's Cup comes as a bitter blow to yachtsmen and landlubbers alike.

Even if he didn't know port from starboard, any Canadian would have known a thrill of pride when the Royal Vancouver Yacht Club's boat paced it out in the pre-elimination series with the British, French and Australian competition.

The Vancouver syndicate explained this week they've withdrawn because they couldn't raise enough cash before the deadline date in spite of a nation-wide campaign.

Design and testing work has already been done on an aluminum hull by North Vancouver marine architect Peter Hatfield and crews have been working up in Endless Summer, the Aussies' former Dame Pattie, bought by George O'Brien.

Everyone knows that America Cup competeition is no league for those who have to watch their dollars, but what a contribution to national pride would have been given if all the thousands of sailors across Canada had chipped in a buck or two to have our country represented in the biggest boat race of them all.

With the Northern Ireland vidence and other pressures on his mind, Britain's Prime Minister Ted Heath can still look back on a personal triumph this week.

He pulled off the biggest sailing coup in Europe Wednesday by placing 12th in the 605-mile Fastnet race, thus earning enough points in the four-race series to win the coveted Admiral's Cup.

When the yachts began the Fastnet, and final race for the trophy, the British, Australians and Americans were neck and neck. The Aussies chances went down the drain, though, when their boat Koomooloo had to quit the Fastnet after losing her rudder.

By beating the American's Carina in Eastnet, Heath's Morning Cloud ended up 49 points ahead of the next boat, the race counting for triple points.

Friends in British racing circles report that Heath has a thing about green — the boat, his crew's outfits, you name it — all are the color of the briny.

While the 12 crews in the centennial canoe pageant have been doing their thing four members of the Victoria Canoe Club have been slogging it out on a project of their own.

Working with two canoes, they've been up in the Nitinat Triangle area, cutting out logs and other debris that spoil the trip down to the Tsusiat Falls, camping on the beach at Nitinat Narrows when the day's work is over.

DOUG HILL
. . . strikes out 11

Members of the Victoria Cruising Club will be concentrating on the Tod Inlet area this weekend, taking a Sunday cruise in Saanich Inlet and cooling off with a swim at Sandy Beach.

Royal Vic sailors hope that Sunday some of the 25-knot winds that have been channelling into the Strait of Juan de Fuca this week will find their way to Haro Strait.

IOR, PHRF, Thunderbirds and Cubs will race to D'Arcy Shoals and back while the smaller Cal 20s and Corsairs will pace it out on a shortened course to Zero Rock and back. The first start gun is set for 10 a.m.

Lack of wind and adverse tide played havoc last Sunday when the club held its William Head race. In IOR competition five boats were unable to complete the course, the race being won by Don Lawson's Cubara.

In second plave over-all and first in C and D division was Guy Screech's Morgan. Third and fourth over-all were Steve Merriman's Vapour and Peter Coombs' Doxy II.

The only boat to finish in PHRF competition was Peter Young's Zest. Again, five others had to call it a day.

Sid Halls' Wild One was first over the finish line, being followed by Bruce Kenning's Fireball, Rob Thompson's Unicorn, John Davies' Bacchus, Pat Chaworth-Musters' Unicorn, Doug Taylor Lee's Fireball, Morgan, Doug Gray's Wayfarer, Ken Kidd's Por Gusto and Chris Metten's Enterprise.

Out on the racing circuit for the first time since she was damaged in a collision earlier this year, Mike Fraser's Windless II earned herself a handsome win in Cal 20 competition Wednesday night.

She outpaced Murray Farmer's Aeolus, Don North's Pegasus, John Boorman's Short Circuit, Roy Barber's Tongariro, A. J. MacGregor's Ookpik, Por Gusto, Jim Carfra and Alan Emery's Aquarius and Gremlin.

Gordie Nickells' Redskin was first in the Thunderbird class, beating out Don Taylor's Sundance, Dave Anstey's Hussy II, Walter Boyes' Baht'at, Walter Roots' Umpka and Frank Berry's Kila Kila.

Other results were:

PHRF — 1, Frank Rhodes' Rampage; 2, Bacchus; 3, Doug Hartley's Maleana; 4, Brian Saunders' Impulse; 5, Vandal; 6, Peter Watts' Merrilees; 7, Gerry Howell-Jones' Heliwr; 8, Bob Akins' Seax; 9, Jorgen Baess' Njord. Jack Woodward's Puff failed to finish.

Fireballs — 1, Doug Taylor Lee; 2, Bruce Kenning; 3, Rob Grundison; 4, Sid Halls.

X Class Dinghies — 1, Doug Gray's Zambezi.

TOM MORRIS GETS BERTH ON BIKE TEAM

Morris, Max Grace of Vancouver and Hank Koning of Calgary were named to the team. Two more will be named following the return of the Canadian cycling team at the Pan American Games in Cali, Colombia.

Gorge Advances To Playoff Semi

Gorge Hotel scored 8-6 and 6-0 victories over Al's Home Service at Royal Athletic Park Thursday night to advance to the Victoria Senior Amateur Baseball League semi-final.

The best-of-three series opened Wednesday with the Hotelmen winning the opener, but a protest by Home Service over the use of an ineligible player was upheld requiring the two Thursday games.

Gorge faces Farmer Construction tonight in the first game of the best-of-three semi-final series at Athletic Park.

Cablevision Takes Crown

Cablevision Juniors defeated Esquimalt Junior Combos, 10-8, at Bullen Park Thursday night to sweep the best-of-three Lower Island junior women's softball final 2-0.

Cablevision will travel to Prince George to compete for the B.C. junior women's title on August 21 and 22.

HADFIELD IN FOLD

NEW YORK (AP) — Left winger Vic Hadfield, new captain of New York Rangers, has signed with the National Hockey League club for the 1971-72 season.

Straths Win Game But Trail by Two

Strathcona Hotel scored its second "exhibition" win, 3-2, over Seaboard Construction Thursday, but the Hotelmen are behind, 2-0, in the best-of-five Victoria Major Men's Softball League semi-final playoffs.

Plagued by injuries and with two regular players on holidays, Strathcona showed up at Central Park again Thursday with only eight players and defaulted the game to Seaboard. An identical situation gave the first game of the semi-final to Seaboard on Tuesday.

Hotelmen used an ineligible player, Jim Moody, in Thursday's game. Moody hit a two-run homer in the fifth inning to pull Strathcona from behind for the 3-2 win. Moody also played in Tuesday's 3-0 Strathcona "victory."

League president John Oster said the Hotelmen will be at full strength for the third game of the series Monday night.

OIL SPILLED IN HARBOR

Ship Captain Fined $2,000

LADYSMITH — Iberian freighter Capt. Lam Sze Cheong was fined $2,000 in court here Thursday for spilling oil into Ladysmith Harbor Aug. 9.

"The spilling of oil in Ladysmith Harbor has caused a dual reaction of harmful biological and moral effects," Judge Robert Wood told the accused after he pleaded guilty to the charge.

"The master is responsible for the acts of his crew and a significant motion should be made to guard against further accidents," Wood added.

Defence counsel J. S. L. Morrison told the court that the oil is thought to have leaked into number four hold of the ship from a fuel tank below the hold. It was inadvertently discharged with salt water from the bottom of the hold which was filled with logs.

Morrison said he felt the master was not negligent because he did not know of the leak until it was being cleaned up by the ship's crew under direction of the chief engineer.

"It was nothing but a small housekeeping accident," he said.

Crown counsel Doug Greer told the court that "under the law the degree of spillage is not specified."

The Olympia Faith has been loading American logs bound for Japan since it anchored in Ladysmith Aug. 5. Its agents on Vancouver Island are Island Shipping of Chemainus.

NEAR-RAMMING of his troller, Scotian, by a 300-foot Russian fishboat early Wednesday morning, has Port Alberni fisherman Elliot Cook, at left, threatening to carry a rifle aboard. Seen with him are Lauri Spinner and his son Ron. Fisheries officials will meet with the commander of the Soviet fishing fleet to investigate the incident.

Long Wait Facing Freighters

Twenty freighters parked at Ladysmith and Cowichan Bay may have to wait a month or more before they are loaded with American logs bound for foreign ports, a Victoria shipping official said today.

The freighters, 11 at Ladysmith and nine at Cowichan, are caught in the squeeze caused by longshore strikes in U.S. west coast ports.

Canadian longshoremen have been ordered to load Canadian cargoes and service regular customers before handling the newcomers, who are last in priority after Canadian and mixed Canadian-U.S. loads.

The island's 900 longshoremen have been kept hopping the past four days dealing with the first two priorities, and no relief is in sight.

"The secondary cargo of American logs is just a passing thing," said Chemainus dispatcher Jim Irvine. "Why should I hire more men now and have to let them go?"

Victoria dispatcher Gus Snelling said freighters waiting to load American logs "will just have to wait. It's too expensive for them to go elsewhere."

Most of the island cargo involved is export, so ports here don't have the problem that faces Vancouver, with unloading piers and forwarding warehouses jammed to overflowing.

The shipping official who predicted the month's delay at Ladysmith and Cowichan Bay said few delays were being experienced in Victoria.

Longshoremen are coping with regular customers, both Canadian and American, and other ships are being waved off to the up-island ports. Six more Canadian freighters are due in Victoria by the weekend.

Steel Work to Start Soon On Cowichan Satellite Station

Erection of steel for structural installations at Lake Cowichan earth satellite station is expected in about two weeks.

Fred Mercer, of Canadian Overseas Telecommunications Corp., said construction should be finished in the spring of 1972. The station, one of two heavy route installations, will be ready for the launching late next year of Anik I, the communications satellite of Telesat Canada.

There will be facilities for both Telesat and department of communications, which will between them provide domestic and overseas links.

Situated about 1½ miles west of Lake Cowichan community, the site is in a natural bowl that is conducive to electronic transmissions without undue interference from other carrier waves.

Telsat awarded a $472,000 building contract to J. A. Peterson Construction Co. Ltd. of Lake Cowichan, with supervision by Vancouver architectural and engineering consultants McCarter, Nairne and Partners.

There will be 35 ground stations in the system, with Lake Cowichan the westernmost. One other heavy station, at Allan Park northwest of Toronto, will command and track the satellite.

INDIANS VOW TOLL CHARGE ON HIGHWAY

MORLEY, Alta. (CP) — Three chiefs of the Stony Indian band council announced Wednesday they plan to convert a section of the Trans-Canada Highway into a toll road.

The move is to press their claim to mineral rights under land they acquired from the province in a swap for land on to which the highway was widened.

Unless the dispute is settled by Aug. 20 the band plans to impose a toll of 25 cents a vehicle where the road cuts through the reserve, west of Calgary.

Rapeseed Capital Fears Title Loss

MAIDSTONE, Sask. (CP) — The bumper sticker on the farm truck said: Maidstone—Rapeseed capital of Canada.

"It was, but it ain't going to be this year," said Julian Janus, one of more than 350 rapeseed growers in Eldon municipality, 40 miles east of Lloydminster on the Alberta-Saskatchewan boundary.

He was helping crop spraying operations from a small airstrip where aircraft have been spraying the highly-toxic chemical Lannate on fields of rapeseed infested with the Bertha army worm.

Mr. Janus, who has grown rapeseed for 16 years, seeded 150 of his 650 acres to rapeseed this year, a decrease from 1970.

"My crop was one of the worst hit in the district and we estimate that while a good crop would have been worth $7,000 we'll now be lucky to get $2,800 from it."

From that return, Mr. Janus must pay the municipality $3.75 an acre—about $565 for spraying his fields.

Since Monday, about 2,500 acres in the municipality have been sprayed and there were another 7,000 acres to be covered.

Mr. Janus said many rapeseed growers had not been able to assess how much damage the voracious worm has done and "there are worse fields than mine."

Besides the cost of spraying, Mr. Janus has to consider the initial cost of seed, planting it and the $250 spent on weed spraying.

Gorden Reeds, a farmer in the neighboring Waseca district, increased his rapeseed acreage this year to 320 from 200 last year. He had 250 acres sprayed with Lannate but one field will have to be resprayed because of a poor kill.

"With optimum condition and price, the crop would have been worth $16,000 and if we are lucky we will be able to salvage 75 per cent of that," he said.

Mr. Reeds said he has been growing rapeseed since 1956 and a similar problem with the army worm occurred in 1961.

"But then we could use DDT and there was no trouble in getting aircraft to spray."

BANNED IN CANADA

DDT has been banned in Canada because of its effect on the environment.

There were conflicting opinions on the effectiveness of the new chemical obtained from Houston, Tex., but farmers generally feel it is doing a good job. The chemical, Lannate, costs $9 a pound and because it is extremely dangerous to humans, elaborate precautions are being taken by those handling it.

Mr. Reeds said government financial assistance would be appreciated.

"I think the over-all loss of the crop in Saskatchewan is going to be more than $1 million and I think this situation with the army worm is as much a disaster as many other cases in which the senior governments provide financial assistance.

"The outbreak in the rapeseed crop on the Prairies is going to be a terrific loss to the country."

Fathers Sell Girls

LAGOS (AP) — Three Nigerian fathers have been jailed for selling their daughters into slavery for $84 each. Court was told that middlemen later resold the girls for between $196 and $224. The prison terms for the three fathers and five other men ranged from six months to five years.

The first draw will be on the Canadian football championship to be played Nov. 28. Further lotteries will be held on the national curling championships and the Manitoba derby.

History in Making

FORT McMURRAY, Alta. (CP) — Two Americans are making a determined bid for a place in Canadian history by paddling from Montreal to the Bering Sea.

Verlan Kruger, 49, of Lansing, Mich., and Clint Waddell, 36, of St. Paul, Minn., have been padding and portaging since April 16. If they reach their objective before the rivers freeze, they'll be the first men in history to accomplish the feat in one season.

No Apology

CALGARY (CP) — Mayor Rod Sykes said Wednesday it is "very unlikely" he will apologize to Police Chief M. J. Kent for statements about the chief's handling of a police charge.

Chief Kent, in a letter from his solicitor, had demanded a written apology by Aug. 19 with copies for the news media.

Geologist Named for Opollo 17 Adventure

HOUSTON (AP) — The United States space agency today named Dr. Harrison H. Schmitt as the first scientist-astronaut selected for a space crew.

Schmitt, a Harvard-trained geolog st, will fly on Apollo 17, last of the moon-landing missions in the Apollo program. Commanding the flight will be Capt. Eugene A. Cernan of the U.S. Navy, veteran of two space trips. The other crew members will be Ronald E. Evans, a navy lieutenant commander who has now flown in space.

Cernan and Schmitt will land on the moon.

Named backups for the mission were the astronauts who last week completed the historic Apollo 15 flight—David R. Scott, James B. Irwin and Alfred M. Woren, all air force officers.

The naming of Schmitt was a victory for the space agency scientific community, which has long said the agency has given preference to long-time jet pilots in selecting space crews.

Bumped from a chance to fly to the moon by the Schmitt selection was Col. Joseph H. Engle of the air force, one-time X15 pilot who had trained for months with Cernan and Evans as the backup crew for Apollo 14.

The Apollo 16 crew, named previously, consists of Cmdr. John W. Young of the navy, Maj. Charles M. Duke of the air force and Lt.-Cmdr. Thomas K. Mattingly, also of the navy. Young and Duke are to explore near the crater Descartes in the moon's central highlands.

Apollo 16 is scheduled next March and Apollo 17 in December, 1972.

Scientists believe that while pilot-astronauts have done well for science on the surface, a trained geologist would be able to make more meaningful on-the-spot observations and evaluations.

Schmitt is the only one of NASA's 13 scientist-astronauts who has worked actively toward a landing mission, having served as backup lunar module pilot for Apollo 15. Most other scientists in the corps are involved in Skylab, a space station program which will follow Apollo.

City Council On Camera

HULL, Que. (CP) — Hull citizens will soon be able to follow municipal council meetings on cablevision.

Council has given permission to Laurentien Cablevision to install cameras in its meeting room and to transmit its meetings in whole or in part to cablevision viewers.

Mayor Marcel D'Amour said Thursday results of a trial period will determine whether the service will be continued.

Low-Rent Block Planned

New low-rent apartments for 30 senior citizens will be built by St. Matthias Garden Court Society and ready for occupancy next spring, it was learned today.

A $142,000 long-term loan to the society was approved by Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. in Ottawa, paving the way for construction of the two-storey building on Richardson Street.

The apartments will be located on a 144-foot lot east of the St. Mathias Anglican Church rectory at 1670 Richardson.

The loan will augment a one-third grant from the provincial government and one-tenth put up by the church, which also donated the land.

Total cost could reach $250,000, "but we hope that estimate is high," said society chairman Canon Jack Rogers. The project will go to tender in 10 days, with construction expected to take six months.

The 18 bachelor and six one-bedroom units will be available for elderly persons with incomes of $200 a month or less. The aparements will contain stove, refrigerator and drapes, and community washing facilities will be provided.

The bachelor units will rent for $65 to $67 a month, the one-bedroom units for $85 to $87.

Rogers said the project would not make a profit, but it is hoped rental revenues will cover repayment of the borrowed money.

Working with Rogers through two years of planning for the building were William Watts, treasurer of the society. Marie Sherwin, secretary, and directors Jack Ledger, Charles McIntosh, Jerry Sadler, Les Reid and Frank Allen.

In addition to the Victoria loan, CMHC also approved an application by the B.C. Baptist Foundation of Vancouver for $2,038,000 to build 36 self-contained units for low-income families and hostel accommodation for 196 elderly persons.

U.K. Offers $91 Million To Malta

LONDON (AP) — Britain offered Malta a five-year deal worth $91.2 million today for continued use of the Mediterranean island as a NATO military base.

The British foreign office said in a statement that an offer has been made to counter Prime Minister Dom Mintoff's demand for $72 million a year.

Sources said the offer called for annual payment of $12 million plus $8.4 million in development aid.

The island's importance in the Western defence plans currently is less than during the Second World War when the Maltese were decorated en masse for stubborn resistance to Nazi bombing attacks.

He followed by scrapping the British defence agreement.

Buttle Blaze Under Control

CAMPBELL RIVER — Firefighters today contained the 42-acre blaze which broke out two weeks ago in a canyon about three miles from the Ralph River campsite at Buttle Lake.

It was started by lightning July 27.

Campbell River district forest ranger Terry Brooks said the fire was under control but 18 men are still at the scene guarding against a flare up.

'Prophet' Dies at 63

DETROIT (UPI) — Prophet Jones, the flamboyant preacher who once owned a $12,000 fur coat and a 54-room mansion bought for him by his flock, died Thursday. He was 63.

Prophet Jones, whose full name and title were the Right Rev. James F. Jones, Dominion Ruler of the Church of the Universal Triumph, The Dominion of God, Inc., died at a friend's home in the inner city.

He had been in ill health since he suffered a stroke last October.

The Wayne County medical examiner's office said Jones' doctor had asked permission to keep the body at the morgue until relatives could be notified.

As Jones lay paralyzed at Ford Hospital after his stroke, some of his followers began squabbling over who should get his belongings, most of them given to him by his followers.

An estimated $2 million worth of valuables were removed from his west side house until Detroit police and the FBI entered the case to straighten it out.

During the 1950s, Jones made many predictions including one that "men will stop dying in the year 2000."

LEAVE CANADA, INDIAN TOLD

VANCOUVER (CP) — Gurcharanjit Singh Atwal, 30, was ordered in provincial court Thursday to return to India by midnight Monday after being convicted of conspiring to bring immigrants into Canada by giving false and misleading information.

He was given a suspended sentence after admitting he played a part in arranging marriages between other accused men and female impersonators. Marriage to a Canadian would help the men pass immigration requirements.

His lawyer, David Gibbons, said Atwall handed over payments to female impersonators for going through marriage ceremonies with immigrants, but was not himself paid.

Corey Stolte, justice department prosecutor, said Atwal coached participants in the marriage ceremonies to give misleading statements to immigration officials.

* * *

He said Atwall played a minor role in an alleged conspiracy in which 38 persons have been charged.

Gibbons said his client, who came to Canada in 1689, was arrested Feb. 19 and didn't have a hearing until Thursday.

Atwal, he said was left without official status in Canada when his passport and immigration papers were taken from him and lost all his savings.

Gibbons said his client didn't eat regularly and as a result spent 50 days in hospitals.

He said Atwal wants to leave Canada as soon as possible because he is being harassed by other East Indians.

"In fact, he has in effect been hiding in a rented room in New Westminster," Gibbons said.

N-Test Criticized

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thirty congressmen asked U.S. District Court Wednesday to force release of a secret government report they believe criticizes plans for underground nuclear tests at the Alaskan island of Amchitka.

Led by Representative Patsy Mink (D-Hawaii) the group had requested the Atomic Energy Commission to release the report. But, said a letter accompanying the lawsuit, presidential counsel John Dean III told Mrs. Mink the report was "prepared for the advice of the president."

Dean refused to submit the report findings to U.S. Congress because "they involve highly sensitive matter that is vital to our defence and foreign policy." The report was made by an interdepartmental committee headed by John Irwin undersecretary of state.

Full-Time Legal Aid Man Hoped

A full-time legal aid office will be established in Greater Victoria — if the government will help financially, Mike Hutcheson, Victoria Bar Association legal aid committee spokesman said today.

Hutcheson said that following a Tuesday meeting between local aid represenatives and Frank Maczko, provincial director of legal aid, Maczko met Deputy Attorney-General Gilbert Kennedy. The results of that meeting, he added, were not yet known.

The VBA at its general meeting in May passed a resolution urging financial aid from the provincial and federal governments for a full-time legal aid system here.

Hutcheson said financing must be secured and a permanent location found to make the full-time office feasible. Cool-Aid has provided temporary office space at the 1900 Fernwood hostel.

With financing, the VBA would be able to hire a lawyer-administrator to look after all legal aid functions in the area.

The VBA for some years has offered a legal aid service locally for both criminal and civil matters financed primarily by the profession and staffed entirely by volunteers.

Free weekly clinics have been held twice a month in Victoria and Langford. The clinics are also staffed by volunteers.

CYCLIST SLAMS STALLED CAR

DUNCAN — A man is in good condition today in St. Joseph's Hospital, Victoria, after his motorbike crashed into a stalled car that was being pushed without lights across a road west of here Wednesday night.

Police said the cyclist, Paddy King, 410 Festubert St., Duncan, received a broken leg and cuts when he hit the car at about 9:30 p.m. on Lake Cowichan Road.

The spokesman said Don W. Ross of Duncan was pushing his car while a friend, who was not injured, was steering.

'More Funds or Retreat... That Is Only Avenue Open'

By ROGER WHITE

The Alcholism Foundation of British Columbia cannot fill the functions for which it was created on its present budget.

The government-sponsored agency for the treatment, education and research of alcoholics and alcoholism, with an annual budget of $300,000, needs substantially more money to expand its present program, according to one of its local staff members.

If more money is not forthcoming, "we will have to restrain, readjust or redesign our program," says social worker Hugh Roberts, who has been with the foundation for six years.

What does this mean to Victoria?

An estimated 3,000 addicts to alcohol in this city need treatment. Without the foundation, to where can they turn?

SCORNED

A few decades ago, alcoholics were scorned and cast aside, but today they are generally encouraged to seek rehabilitation at the many agencies. But, these centres have limited budgets to cope with the disease.

Last year, the agencies in Victoria handling alcoholism treated only 10 per cent of the total number of alcoholics. The Alcoholism Foundation cared for about a hundred. Of these sixty-eight per cent improved their conditions after treatment. Six per cent deteriorated.

The Victoria community needs a detoxication centre. At present, the alcoholic must 'dry out' at home unless he is endangered with complications like convulsions and delirium tremens requiring care in a hospital.

MUST EXPAND

Victoria's Alcoholism Foundation informal educational program needs expansion.

"Our present staff fits in lectures and meetings but a full-time educator could reach more people," says Roberts.

Pamphlets, films, including "08", and other materials are sent from its main office in Vancouver.

"The best way to prevent alcoholism is to stop a possible alcoholic before he starts, with the aid of proper education," said Cathie Perkins, supervisor of the Alcoholism Foundation in the Victoria region.

She is helping to promote a successful Foundation idea, followed by four large industries in Vancouver — concerning employee alcoholism control and treatment programs.

"It is far better than firing the disabled worker," she said.

The Alcoholism Foundation now with four clinics in British Columbia was initiated at Vancouver in 1953 "when it was obvious the alcoholic must be treated" Miss Perkins said. The Victoria branch, staffed by four employees, started in 1964.

Detoxication Centre Needed For Victoria Area

"An alcoholic was arrested for an offence and came in piously for treatment before sentence."

Each alcoholic is counselled for his individual problem and if necessary, directed to further guidance. He may be selected to attend a closed discussion group, helping him to understand his hidden problems and attitudes.

"He is usually hesitant to speak of them at first," Roberts said.

"The Foundation is sometimes criticized on the grounds that it is too free to give pills," Miss Perkins said.

Some are addicted to a narcotic simultaneously. Most of this sizeable minority use barbiturates. Some use hallucinogens. A few are addicted to heroin.

"Alcohol's in the same bag as heroin," Roberts said.

"If they were given equal moral and legal treatment they could be equally dangerous."

NEVER CURED

"It's inconsistent alcohol is legal and the other equally potent drugs not. They should be controlled equitably illegal," Roberts delivered.

Cathie Perkins points out one of its life-long scars.

"No alcoholic can be said to be cured."

"There is always the danger of drinking again. One slip and it could become a habit again."

Miss Perkins criticized those who considered an alcoholic to have failed when he takes to the bottle after lasting months without a drink.

"To us, the patient has improved, which is good."

HE'S HELPING TO ERASE A NIGHTMARE

LYTLE CREEK, Calif. (AP) — Last year Phillip J. Kelley caused a blaze that ravaged 34,000 acres of watershed worth $16 million and cost $1.25 million to put out.

This summer he's back in the San Bernardino Mountains working to help the blackened lands recover, trying to prevent similar conflagrations while serving a four-month sentence.

Every weekday morning, Kelley climbs into the back of a truck with nine other prisoners and rides into the charred mountains 40 miles east of Los Angeles to help clear and restore the land.

The fire started Sept. 28, a day after Kelley's group finished a recording session in nearby Riverside. Kelley says he had gone to Lytle Creek in the mountains "to check on six marijuana plants I had there."

"I brought along some fireworks I had purchased in Denver when the band was playing there. I started shooting them off. I was carefree, careless. I wasn't thinking how dry it was.

"Suddenly one caught in a bush close to me. It began to flame up. I tried stepping on it. That was a mistake. All it did was spread it out. In seconds it was too late."

VICTORIA, B.C., FRIDAY, AUGUST 13, 1971 —PAGE 21

OLD REFRAIN

Come Now, Doctor Watch the Facts

Death is inevitable. Taxes are inevitable. Inevitable, too, is the British immigrant doctor preaching to Canadians on the evils of "socialized medicine." Heigh-ho. That's life.

Even so, I was astonished at the incredible yardage of newsprint gratuitously provided earlier this week on our good Page Five to a British immigrant doctor whose information was somewhat tired (five years out of date), whose prejudices were even narrower than others of his kind and whose motivation for breaking into the usually shunned glare of public opinion seems to have been a kind of outright blackmail.

What 33-year-old Dr. Brian S. Pound, of our town, is telling us, gentle reader, is that if the British Columbia government goes any further toward "socialized medicine" he will take off for other parts where things are done more to his liking. It cannot be considered as an idle threat, either. That's just what Dr. Pound did when he pulled out of Britain. "If we don't like it," he told our Don Vipond, "then it's up to us to get out," a contingency that does not appear to be included in the Hippocratic Oath.

Dr. Pound is not unusual since thousands of British doctors have been doing that in the 25 years since Britain's National Health Service assumed a world leadership in humanitarian medicine, but he does seem rather young and inexperienced to have made such a bold decision.

Indeed, most of his time in England appears to have been in training, for which the British taxpayer shelled out $22,500. (Dr. Pound told Vipond that it cost the state a mere $6,000 to give him the education that's earned him such rich rewards in British Columbia, but the official 1967 figure on state subsidies for doctor training in the United Kingdom was $22,500 per doctor; if that's what it cost to license Dr. Pound they sure as shootin' got a small return on the investment.)

It was a matter of conscience, Dr. Pound told Vipond, to rebel against Britain's "second rate" medicine and certainly one must agree that there is nothing "second rate" about his subsequent career as a general practitioner in Victoria. His listed income under B.C. Medicare was $41,452 two years ago, $53,291 last year. (Just once I'd like to meet a British doctor who left as a matter of conscience without instantly doubling or tripling his income.)

★ ★ ★

Apart from the background of his brief practice, Dr. Pound is in the classic tradition of such immigrants who so often justify the desertion of their nation and their patients by a paranoic attack on the British system and issue the warning that It Can Happen Here. To that, all I can say is (1) we should be so lucky and (2) isn't it just a teeny-weeny bit cheeky for this Johnny-Come-Lately to be threatening us if our elected representatives displease him?

Dr. Pound's main beef against the National Health Service is the familiar lament that the general practitioner is not given hospital privileges, that, as he told Vipond, "if you can't treat the patient with an aspirin you've got to refer him."

Even in those days when the young doctor was on the scene, that was patently untrue, as he surely knows. Then, and now, 80 per cent of all the nation's ills are treated in the British family doctor's surgery. Under the system the general practitioner is just exactly the primary diagnostician that he is in Canada, the difference being that the referral is made to a specialist when there is an operation to be performed in hospital.

There are two schools of thought on this. My own doctor in London was one of those who thought it the best system, hadn't used a knife in 20 years except for an occasional circumcision, and considered it only sensible logic that, whether it be a tonsillectomy or a lobotomy, surgery was for the specializing technician. The point is that it is an arguable question. To let Dr. Pound get away with his one-sided, sweeping generalization can hardly be said to be objective reporting.

It must be said, as well, that Dr. Pound is either unaware of recent efforts to widen the function of the general practitioner in Britain or that he chose not to inform Vipond of this trend.

This has been the great story in Britain over the past few years, under both the Labor and Conservative governments. The aim has been to set up clinics and group practices, often in conjunction with local authority public health centres. Its success goes a long way to wiping out Dr. Pound's "aspirin" argument.

This polyclinic idea, demonstrably effective in the Soviet Union and recommended in the first blueprint of the National Health Service, means that doctors may combine various specialties in obstetrics, pediatrics, geriatrics, chiropody and other fields, rent offices on the premises of health centres and use the centre's nursing and secretarial staff and diagnostic equipment.

In other cases, with the encouragement and financial assistance of the Ministry of Health, group practices, involving from three to 12 doctors, are replacing the old one-man operations.

When the service began in 1948 three of every four practices were single-handed. Now three of every four are group arrangements. There are new challenges, new rewards, including higher incomes. What Dr. Pound describes as "tremendous apathy" is simply not true.

What I am saying is that Dr. Pound, to my own knowledge, was not at all fair in his presentation of these facts. As for his opinion, I find it equally suspect. Any man who describes health as "a commodity" and the doctor's role as "free trade with his customers," is hardly qualified to judge a national medical scheme based on the philosophy that good health is every citizen's right. For all its faults, Britain's National Health Service is dedicated to that security — womb-to-tomb, as the saying goes — and may still serve as a model for a comprehensive plan in these climes.

If that means the disappearance of Dr. Pound to new climes — where? Hawaii, perhaps? — then so be it.

$150,000 Bill

Police Called Irresponsible, Selfish As Council Assesses Work-to-Rule

The effects of police work-to-rule tactics on city revenue and the pay hike in excess of the amount budgetted will amount to more than $150,000—and the city should send taxpayers a special notice to remind them of it, council was told Thursday.

Lost revenue accounts for $70,000 of the total, according to a statement read to council by Acting Mayor Clyde Savage.

Savage also charged the union membership with violating its oath of office and its own union constitution.

He also criticized members of the force for what he called an attitude of irresponsibility and self-interest.

●

Council may decide to send citizens special tax notices covering the amount of money the union's work-to-rule policy will cost the city.

The wage settlement agreed to by the police commission and the union membership this week amounts to a compounded 18.2 per cent increase over 15 months.

Savage also said the Victoria police commission will "seek the support" of other core municipality commissions and the provincial government to prevent another similar occurence.

He said the police commission "will be re-examining its 1971 budget critically with the view to effecting all possible economies before approaching this council for extra funds."

Although receipts from provincial court fines for the last few months do not yet reflect the revenue loss, city officials reported to council the loss will eventually cost the city between $65,000 and $70,000.

In his statement, Savage said: "Although it has been reported that it was this loss of revenue that resulted in the Police Commission's aggreeing to such a generous settlement rather than appear before the B.C. Mediation Commission some weeks hence, this is not the case."

Savage added that if it were not for mediation officer, Clark Gilmour, "the matter would still be in dispute."

"While I cannot comprehend the logic that has led the very men in this community who are sworn to uphold the law to behave so irresponsibly as to violate their oath of office and their own union constitution in relation to a matter which is so obviously one of self interest, steps must be taken to prevent this happening again."

Figures attached to copies of Savage's statement showed that the number of traffic offences punishable by fines reported by the police dropped from 751 in March to 188 in April, 137 in May, seven in June and two in July.

Under that category are such offences as impaired driving, hit and run, dangerous driving and driving under suspension. It also includes speeding, stop sign and red light violations by people not using B.C. driving licences.

Reports of traffic violations punishable by demerit points also decreased: March, 722, April, 585, May, 440, June, 27, July, four. These include speeding, stop sign and red light violations by people holding B.C. licences.

Parking fines (not including meter violations) dropped to a total of 11 for July while normally there are about 60 such tickets made out every day.

Ald. Harold Olafson, appeared to receive agreement from other aldermen when he suggested that special tax notices be sent out to cover the amounts needed because of the revenue loss and the unexpectedly high pay settlement.

The notices should be sent, he said, "so the citizens know where the money's going."

The city had allowed for a police pay settlement similar to that won by other civic employees, which amounted to a compounded 15 per cent increase over the life of a two-year contract.

Ald. Peter Pollen said he "heartily concurred" with Savage's remarks about the police union action, saying the contract "hasn't been negotiated in good faith" and the settlement is "completely unsupportable" in terms of the city's ability to pay.

Ald. Tom Christie said he thought the pay increase was "something colossal" and really amounts to 21 per cent over one year.

FEARSOME HYRAX — Don't be fooled by the small size and cuddly fur of the animal held by Brett Bergerud. That and the cute little heady eyes are a transparent coverup for terrorist activities involving large dogs, which he has a nasty habit of chasing, according to some residents of the Gordon Head area. Scientists say the hyrax, which was turned over to animal controller Colin Neithorp, who thought he was a marmot, is related to the hoofed mammals. And everyone knows the devil is a hoofed mammal. (Times photo by Bill Halkett.)

'Manipulation' of Law Criticized by Curtis

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis said today he is "very concerned" at the recent Greater Victoria police work-to-rule tactics employed prior to a contract settlement.

"I don't think the law of the land should be a point to be manipulated in a labor dispute," he said.

"The people of Greater Victoria should not feel the law is being manipulated."

Curtis, also chairman of the Saanich police commission, said he will be taking the matter up with the attorney-general and the Saanich Policemen's Association."

DETAILS COMING

He said he will release details next week on the effect of the police work-to-rule in Saanich.

Asked why he had not voiced criticism while the work-to-rule was in effect, he said "we didn't get our statistics that graphically until negotiations were in the late stages.

"This should be used as an object lesson to make sure it does not happen again."

Commenting on the 18.2 per cent salary raise in the 15-month contract, he said the kinds of increases won by police in large and small cities were examined.

PARITY DEFEATED

"We see in several cities very significant increases in police earnings, presumably indicating the strength of their argument — it's tougher work today than a few years ago, and various administrations recognize they have not been keeping pace.

"The principle of parity (with Greater Vancouver) has been defeated, as it should be."

Curtis agreed that the difference is narrowed slightly and said he would have preferred the difference to have been maintained.

(Greater Victoria police were $34 a month behind Greater Vancouver. This was narrowed to $26 a month, but mainland contracts will expire three months earlier and the last-stage increase was granted six months earlier than in Greater Victoria.)

Pollen on Committee To Police Reid Plan

Ald. Peter Pollen has been appointed to sit on the committee that will decide on final details of the new Reid waterfront development approved in principle by council Thursday.

Pollen and community development chairman Ald. Harold Olafson were appointed to the committee when council formally adopted a motion setting out some guidelines for a redesigned version of the controversial project.

Pollen has led criticism of the earlier Reid proposal and was instrumental in formulating the new guidelines.

The committee will also include city hall planning officials, the developer and his architects.

Council also slightly altered the guidelines agreed to at an informal council meeting earlier Thursday at which Reid was present.

Pollen said the public should be aware that the density of the new development will contain a floor-space ratio of 3.5:1 only if the 43,000 square feet of water-lot is included in the figuring. The density on land alone would amount to 5.5:1, he said.

This and a guarantee that the developer will not build on the water lot were included in the guidelines.

Other guidlines formally agreed to included:

"That the space required for parking below street level at Wharf Street be not included in the floor space ratio calculations;

"That the view of the Inner Harbor be maintained from street level at Wharf Street; and

ISLANDERS KEEP IT CLEAN

Police Crack Down on Litterbugs

The B.C. parks branch is cracking down on people who discard rubbish and garbage in provincial parks.

Lloyd Brooks, deputy minister of recreation and conservation, said today more than 20 persons have been convicted under the new Litter Act and hundreds of people cautioned.

The judges have imposed fines ranging from $50 to $100, he said. Maximum fine is $500.

Brooks said most of the offenders have been apprehended in the interior of the province. He knew of no litter conviction on Vancouver Island.

"I don't know if this is because RCMP there are more alert to the problem of litter or the open type of country makes it easier to spot offenders, he said. "But police have been instructed to enforce the law throughout the province."

CITY OFFENDERS PROSECUTED

Welfare Frauds Up to 7 Per Cent

Seven per cent of welfare cases in Victoria involve fraud, a city hall report says.

The figure compares with a two to three per cent fraud rate estimated five years ago, the report says.

Signed by welfare administrator F. A. Davidson, it says that since April of this year, about 400 cases have been investigated by a team of two social workers.

Of these, 32 were referred to the city police forces's fraud squad, and three were rejected by the prosecutor. The rest are being processed in court.

Davidson says when welfare fraud cases are taken to court, "this can involve a good deal of staff time in the witness box."

"It would be much more satisfactory if we had sufficient staff to visit and check out every case, so that the chance of fraud would be minimized."

He had requested information about welfare fraud at a recent council meeting.

The investigation was apparently carried out in response to a policy begun by Rehabilitation Minister P. A. Gaglardi, upon becoming minister promised to clear the "deadbeats" off the welfare rolls.

A covering letter attached to the report, written by city manager Bill Hooson, says the provincial government "recently conducted an audit of cases being administered by the city's department and I am advised that they have concluded that the city is taking all reasonable precautions to prevent the fraudulent dispersal of funds."

The report says that on April 16 two workers were sent out to visit homes and to work in the case assessment section of the office.

The workers were told to watch for both fraud and cases where a need had been overlooked. No report was given by Davidson on the latter.

Of the 29 cases before the court, Davidson said he has no up-to-date information about their progress.

Any fraudulent statements that result in overpayment are immediately turned over to the police fraud squad. Some cases — involving common-law relationships, wrong addresses, children out of the home and not reported — are adjusted by the welfare office, Davidson says.

"Fraud has been much more prevalent where a man is the head of a family group and is more likely to obtain work and not report earnings than by woman who is head of the family and is restricted because of her children.

"In the latter group where common-law situations exist, we have been successful in at least unearthing quite a number and getting the men to accept responsibility for the family."

ANNE'S GOOD AT SPOTTING BARGAINS

'Poor' Princess Has to Make Do With $288 a Week

● This Sunday England's Princess Anne will be 21 years old — and she won't get a penny more for it from Parliament, even though she is the poorest member of the Royal Family. This is the first of two articles on how the princess gets along on her pittance, and what she plans to do with her life.

By GILLIAN FRANKS

LONDON (WNS) — Flicking through a rack of dresses in a trendy Chelsea boutique, the girl in the jeans and pale yellow sweater stopped at a midi-length creation in leather and suede and sighed longingly.

"I'd love it," she said, "but I just can't afford it this month. If it's still here when I get my next allowance . . ."

If it's still there in September she should be able to buy it with a cheque drawn on Coutts, the royal bankers

For then Princess Anne, 21 on Sunday, August 15, will have drawn her quarterly allowance of $3,600 as part of the $14,400 a year now allocated to her by the nation from the Consolidated Fund.

Parliament granted her the money when she was 18 but no payment was made until January, 1970.

Until then she received nothing from the state, although she had carried out a pretty full program of engagements for the previous two years. Even now, she is the poorest member of the Queen's immediate family.

Prince Charles currently draws around $240,000 from the Duchy of Cornwall, and the Duke of Edinburgh $96,000 a year. When they reach 21, Prince Edward and Prince Andrew will each get $24,000 a year, increasing to $60,000 a year when they marry.

But if Anne marries, her allowance rises only to $36,000 a year—the same as that paid to her aunt, Princess Margaret.

Even now, she has surprisingly little spare money to spend on herself. So it's perhaps small wonder that she has developed a flair for spotting a bargain. She has regularly visited boutiques and chain-stores, and recently she returned a blouse which she found was the wrong size when she got it home.

Anne has had an account at Coutts since she was 16, but was not allowed to write cheques without the permission of her mother or father. At 21 she will finally be completely in charge of her own money — or at least what is left of it after she has paid her expenses.

About $288 a week may seem a lot of money for a girl of 21 to handle, but out of it she has to buy all her own clothes — previously the more expensive clothes, like the long white satin dress she wore for the last State opening of Parliament, were billed to her mother.

She also has to run an official car with a chauffeur — the dashing Scimitar sports car she uses is now relegated to off-duty hours. She has already one lady-in-waiting, and she might have to engage another.

Then there are travel expenses and gifts to charity. If she wants to furnish the small room which adjoins her second-floor Buckingham Palace suite as an office, she will have to pay for the fittings herself — as her father did.

Her riding tuition and maintenance of her horses comes out of the $14,400 a year, too. So there is little money left for casual spending.

She finds it difficult to indulge in her new-found taste for classical music and was delighted when a new range of cheap re-issues recently appeared. She told a friend: "Now perhaps I shall be able to afford them."

After her 21st birthday, it is believed the Queen will allow Princess Ann a larger say in the handling of the private investments which, over the years, have made her a very wealthy young woman, although she derives little material benefit from them.

And Queen Mary bequeathed Anne a large amount of jewelry, including a very valuable tiara, several ruby and sapphire rings, three strings of pearls, brooches and two jewelled gold bracelets.

As yet she has worn none of these in public, and appears to prefer boutique jewelry, which the Queen good-humoredly refers to as "Anne's junk."

It is said that both the Queen and the Queen Mother plan to hand over further priceless pieces of jewelry to Anne on her 21st birthday.

She has no interest in furs and little time for really informal expensive clothes. Like Princess Margaret and Princess Alexandra she will almost certainly continue to buy her slips and sweaters from an Oxford Street chain-store, and most of her other clothes from boutiques and ready-to-wear departments.

Although she seldom handles money — she was recently seen puzzling over how to insert coins in a juke-box — she knows what it's like to be short of it.

At school, the Queen gave strict instructions that Anne was to receive the same pocket-money as the other girls. At first Anne found it hard to manage and, according to friends, often wrote home asking for extra pocket-money. She was always turned down.

Apart from clothing — most of which she needs for "work" — her only extravagance is riding. She keeps two horses at Buckingham Palace and can sometimes be seen early in the morning riding in Hyde Park.

Says a friend who has known her since their school days: "Despite her 'dolly princess image' she is very conscious of her duties and obligations and went through a period when she felt she wouldn't be able to justify taking an allowance of $14,400.

"Apparently she felt a bit better when someone pointed out that Buckingham Palace spends more than six thousand a year just on wine for official banquets."

NEXT: To the Olympics.

DEAR ABBY...

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My problem is my husband. We have been married for 10 years and have three children, ages 4 thru 9.

My husband will not discipline the children. It is all left up to me. The only time he will do any correcting is if I am not at home. I work in a factory, eight hours a day five days a week, and I am tired when I get home. When the kids fight among themselves, I yell at them, then my husband gets mad at me for yelling at the kids, but if they are fighting and I ask him to make them stop he says, "Leave me alone."

Now he tells me that he can't stand my yelling at the kids all the time, and if I don't quit it, he is going to move out of the house.

I love him and I want him to be happy, but I'm being pulled between knowing the kids need to be yelled at, and trying to keep my husband home. Please help me.

—Pulled Between

DEAR PULLED: Your method of disciplining the kids isn't working or you wouldn't be yelling all the time. Try another technique. When they fight, separate them until they get good and lonesome for each other. (Don't worry, they will.) And keep them apart until they learn to get along better. Time is in your favor. The older they get, the smarter they get.

DEAR ABBY: How do you feel about asking for a doggie bag in a high class restaurant? It is an acceptable practice in many places, but we have quite a debate going on at home about this—Glendale

DEAR GLENDALE: If I'm unable to do justice to the meal in a restaurant, I ask for a doggie bag, and I have no qualms. (I also have no dog, and the leftovers are delicious!)

What's your problem? You will feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to ABBY, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif., 90069. For a personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

Home Delivery Service Cramped by Big Plazas

By ANN DUNSMUIR

Home deliveries — once a necessity for homebound housewives — are a thing of the past in big cities and getting their knocks right here in Victoria.

An increase in the number of working women, high-rise apartments and two-car families is blamed for the loss for this once profitable business.

Managers of drycleaners, dairies and bakeries in Victoria admit the trend today is toward a one-stop shopping trip to the nearest plaza but had conflicing opinions about the home delivery situation here.

Glen Priestly, home-service manager for Northwestern Creamery, described home delivery as a "growing field.

"We are not in the dairy business anymore," he said. "We're in the home-service business."

However, Victoria bakery owners disagree with him. They find home delivery more trouble than it's worth.

John McDonald, owner-manager of McDonald's Bakery, said his firm "never tried to do much in the home delivery field" and took its trucks off the road 18 months ago.

Depot supervisor Donald Stewart thinks home delivery is "a thing of the past."

"It's a trend today," he said. "there are too many working wives and nobody is home when the driver calls."

James McEvay, owner of Nu-Way Cleaners, believes the decline in home deliveries is part of a "universal trend" but doesn't worry about drop-off cleaners affecting his business.

McEvay conducted a survey among men's and women's clubs here to determine what influenced people most when choosing a drycleaner — quality, price, fast service or convenience.

Mrs. H. J. Warkentyne, a local housewife, backs up McEvay's analysis of the situation

Another Victoria housewife, Mrs. William Stavdal, described home delivery as "a vital necessity when children are very small — particularly in bad weather."

But now that her children are in school she can't be bothered waiting for home deliveries and hates the idea of "milk sitting around all day in the heat."

Gordon Carter of Individual Dry Cleaners has noticed a drop in requests for home delivery.

He said drivers complain that no one is at home when they call and the extra time needed to service high-rise apartments.

He blames an increase in working wives and two-car families for the situation.

One Victoria firm reports a sharp rise in home deliveries.

"Breweries are going full out," said Archie McBride, of Jasper Trucking Limited.

His firm makes deliveries for all major brewing companies.

Mrs. Charlotte Douglas, of Cherub Diaper Service, blames a decline in sales on the recent spell of good weather.

"The mothers can dry diapers outside," she said. "In the winter we'll be busy again."

But Mrs. Douglas may be too optimistic.

Miss Lillian Randall, district director of the local Victorian Order of Nurses, described home deliveries as "almost non-existant."

"There has been only one home delivery in the last three years," she said.

Hunger Only Requirement for Program

SEATTLE (AP) — Residents of this economically depressed area are helping feed hungry neighbors under a volunteer program composed more of sharing than charity.

Neighbors in Need operates 34 food banks in the Seattle area and distributed 33,000 cases of free food in the first six months of operation. It receives no government aid.

Seattle's soaring unemployment rate, now 15 per cent with reductions in the aircraft and aerospace industry, created a new class of poor — persons who, despite their inability to put food on the table, did not qualify for government assistance under current regulations.

The program was founded last November by three church groups and now involves about 300 churches.

Rev. Hal Perry, one of the program's founders, says he and others discovered many hungry persons could not get help under existing programs. Persons without cooking facilities cannot get government food stamps, nor can single persons 18 to 50 years old. Some recently unemployed middle-class families own too much property to qualify for state or federal help.

At first, the organization served an estimated 8,000 persons a week but the number jumped after the state reduced welfare allowances in April.

Customers are predominantly older persons, many of them 40 to 50 years old, often with families and some out of work for the first time in their lives.

Food comes from everywhere, said Peggy Maze, coordinator for one food bank in the city's central area.

A man who obtained food from the food banks twice while searching for a job came back a few weeks later and endorsed his first pay cheque over to the program.

Truckloads of potatoes, beans and fresh vegetables have come from farmers, produce wholesalers and food packers in the farming areas of eastern Washington.

Women Ask Supreme Court For Abortion on Demand

WASHINGTON (AP) — Seven women's groups and several well-known women have asked the Supreme Court to protect "the right of reproduction autonomy" by permitting medical abortions everywhere in the United States.

In a friend-of-court brief in cases from Georgia and Texas, the organizations and 47 women, including anthropologist Margret Mead, said they were not advocating abortion as a necessarily desirable solution to personal or social problems.

"We do contend, however," they said through a lawyer, "that each woman has the right to make the decision for herself unimpeded by restrictive laws" except for those regulating the practice of medicine.

Later this year the court will hear arguments on the Georgia and Texas cases whose central issue is whether states may continue to say which abortions are legal and which are not. Before that, however, the court must decide if it has jurisdiction to rule.

The brief said fundamental rights of women are in conflict with the laws of nearly all states. By restricting the circumstances for a lawful abortion, the brief said, women are deprived of dignity and equality and compelled to produce "vast numbers of unwanted children."

Additionally, the brief argued, legalizing medical abortions would save lives since illegal abortions generally are performed in unsafe conditions.

About 5,000 women die each year from criminal abortions, at the rate of 100 deaths for each 1,000 abortions.

By contrast, the appeal said, there are only three deaths per 100,000 abortions when the operation is performed by a doctor in a hospital.

Overdue Library Books Down on Credit Rating

EDMONTON (CP) — That long overdue library book could cause you some trouble.

It might be on your credit rating.

Because of it, you may find the bank won't lend you the cash you need. Or the department store won't go along with your plan to get furniture or a TV set on credit.

This could happen if a list of delinquent borrowers is turned over to a collection agency. It did in Edmonton where accounts representing $14,800 for overdue books was given to a collection agency last year.

When a collection agency is called in, the delinquent borrower's record becomes available for credit checking anywhere in North America and it could be included in the individual's credit rating.

Of course, if the borrower returns the book, the black mark could be removed.

"More thin 50 percent of the delinquent borrowers just don't care," said Morton Coburn, director of libraries for Edmonton.

The Edmonton library attempts to recover the book by a system of notices, the first of which is sent 14 days after the book became due. Despite this, the number of adult overdue books increased 27 per cent last year.

THE TALE OF CATHERINE SCHUBERT

Woman and Three Children Joined Men On Perilous Trek to Cariboo Country

elizabeth forbes

Who was Catherine Schubert? How did it happen that she was a lone woman on the great Overlander trek of 1862, from Fort Garry to Fort Edmonton, across the Rocky Mountains to the Fraser River and down its wild waters to Fort Kamloops?

I mentioned her in my Wednesday column and the paper was barely on the street when a voice over the telephone was asking me these questions.

The Schuberts came to Fort Garry in 1861 from St. Paul, 450 miles away on the American side of the border.

At the Fort, talk was all of gold discovered in the Cariboo and interest centred on men arriving from eastern points with the avowed intention of trekking over the mountains to the mines.

Was Pregnant

August Schubert was eager to join this trek and he suggested that his wife, then 28 years of age and pregnant, stay at the fort with their three children until he could send for her.

Catherine was just as determined he should not go alone. It would be nearly five months, she said, before the new baby arrived and by then they would be in the Cariboo and her husband would be washing a fortune from the creeks.

She was so persuasive that the rule that no women be included in the expedition was suspended for her benefit.

There were 96 Red River carts, drawn by twice as many oxen, in the caravan that set out from Fort Garry in June, 1862. Mrs. Schubert rode astride a buckskin pony. Two basket cradles were slung across the shoulders of this animal; in one was little Mary and, in the other, August junior. Two-year-old James was carried most of the way by his father.

Almost Drowned

It was mid-August before the overlanders got their first sight of the mountains and in that time they had been beset with storms, almost drowned in the swollen rivers, they had killed many of their oxen and their horses and had reached the verge of starvation.

At Tete Jaune Cache the party separated, some deciding to float down the Fraser River from the Cache to Fort George and from there to the gold fields, and others opting for a route across country to the headwaters of the North Thompson River then to Cariboo or Kamloops. The Schuberts were in the last named group.

The two weeks before they reached the Thompson were the worst they had experienced. Days were getting shorter and the mountain air was cold. They had to break trail through dense forest and if they made 10 miles a day it was considered good. Food was so scarce that many became weak and ill. Some of the men in desperation even boiled their buffalo lariat ropes and tried to eat them.

Finally, there was left only the faithful buckskin which Mrs. Schubert rode and it, too had to be killed for food.

Rough rafts were hammered together at the river and they started down toward Kamloops. In this last week they had nothing to eat except a few scanty provisions traded with some Indians fishing on the river bank and raw potatoes gathered at an Indian village they discovered abandoned because of a smallpox epidemic.

They reached Fort Kamloops on October 13. The rafts were run ashore a short distance above the fort. A tent was hastily put for Mrs. Schubert and there, a few hours later, at an early hour on the 14th, with an Indian woman from the fort in attendance, the first white girl was born in the interior of British Columbia. Her parents named her Rose.

Schubert mined in the Cariboo for 11 years, rejoining his family in Lillooet in 1874, then moving into the North Okanagan where he took up a homestead and where "Granny" Schubert, as Catherine became known there, lived out her days.

A monument erected to her memory in the little town of Armstrong, close to where the Schubert ranch was located, tells of her remarkable feat of endurance in 1862. One that few women would be equal to, and with the additional care of three small children, one which few men would have the courage to undertake.

Cancer-Causing Asbestos Swirling Through Cities

WASHINGTON (AP) — Asbestos, believed to cause lung cancer and other diseases, is swirling through the air in United States cities in growing concentrations, a medical researcher told a Senate group recently.

Dr. William J. Nicholson, assistant professor of medicine at Mount Sinai Medical New York, said a problem confined to laborers who worked with asbestos, has reached out to anyone who breathes.

The reason: asbestos, a mineral installed primarily for its fireproof qualities, is used more and more in areas where it can be scattered by the wind and inhaled.

"Not only are people breathing asbestos," Nicholson said, "they are maintining it."

In addition to potential lung cancer, Nicholson said, a person breathing asbestos risks mesothelioma, a diffuse cancer of the lining of the chest or abdomen.

Hemoglobin 'Breathing Molecule'

CAMBRIDGE, England (CP) — A discovery bringing hope for relief for congenital blood diseases has been made at the molecular biology laboratory of the Medical Research Council.

Dr. Max Perutz, director of the laboratory, won a Nobel prize for solving the mystery of how the hemoglobin — red coloring of blood — carries oxygen from the lung to the tissues.

Having found that hemoglobin was a "breathing molecule," a sort of molecular lung, he spent years in experimental work and now has found how ogygen changes the shape of the molecule, by iron atoms which shrink and expand to hold the oxygen.

The medical importance is basic to the study of many blood diseases, both inherited and acquired, showing what has gone wrong in, for example, sickle cell anemia which is widespread throughout the world.

BEAUTY COMES IN HALF SIZES

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — One of the entrants in the Miss Los Angeles Press Club beauty contest was Ruth Hermine, a midget standing three-feet tall.

The club stewards ruled she would have to pay only half the $10 entrance fee.

YOUR HEALTH Dr. Walter Alvarez

I have often thought that one of the most important feelings for people to have is that they are needed, and that they are doing something useful in this world. Many a person has come to me, feeling sick and mentally distressed, and all I could find wrong was that he or she did not feel needed. That very wise woman, Mrs. Pearl S. Buck, in her thoughtful book "Man and Woman," says, "The most tragic person in our civilization is the middle-aged woman whose duties in her home are finished, whose children are gone, and who is in her mental and physical prime and yet feels there is a no more need for her."

How wonderful if such a woman can find something to do with her time, perhaps in an organization working for the public good. I was delighted recently when a book came to my desk that is full of information on this very subject; it is called "A Guide to Volunteer Services," written by Anne David, a woman who, with her husband, has been involved in volunteer activities throughout most of her married life.

Fortunately, there are many such people who would like to be helpful to others in this world. For example, my daughter, Mrs. Gladys Archibald, was for years a "grey lady" helping in her city's best-known hospital. When her fine husband passed away, she helped herself to avoid loneliness by immediately starting to help people who had recently lost a spouse. Soon, with her secretarial training, she was helping students in the nearby university to get out their theses; also, she was helping one of the professors with his work. She assisted the minister of her church by writing the weekly church bulletin. Often she would baby-sit so that a mother could run necessary errands; and most recently she has been helping the local firemen to get out their annual report. By helping other people she has helped herself to have a full and interesting life which might otherwise have been a very lonely one.

Mrs. David tells in her book how to become a volunteer. As she says, "A volunteer is someone who enjoys contributing to another person's welfare — or to the welfare of the community at large . . . A volunteer can be the eyes for the blind; the legs for someone whose own legs can no longer be depended upon; a pair of strong arms or nimble fingers for someone who can't claim that wealth. A volunteer can be someone who knows how to do something another cannot do."

She says that many people do not volunteer for any of the many organizations where they could be of service because they feel that they have nothing to offer — but this is not true. She says that by doing volunteer work, people often discover talents and abilities they didn't know they had and learn new skills that bring them a lot of satisfaction. She points out that many charitable organizations, civic groups, and social service agencies could not function without the help of volunteers. She tells about the Red Cross and VISTA, about health programs and services, political organizations, religious-affiliated organizations and organizations in the arts and sciences that need people to help them.

There are things for people to do in a great many different fields. A volunteer can be doing something that he or she really enjoys doing and finds interesting. This book will be invaluable for all those persons who have spare time in which they would like to be of service. I have often wished for a book like this that I could put into the hands of a woman whose only "disease" was that she felt useless in this world.

City Chinese Puzzled Over Flags

Victoria Chinese community has a flag problem since Canada recognized the People's Republic of China last year.

A member of the Chinese community said the new relationship with China has caused some difference of opinion on what flag should be flown at official functions — the flag of Nationalist China, or the flag of mainland China.

"Since all of this started no one knows which flag to put up at official ceremonies," he said. "If you put up the flag of the People's Republic they will say you are pro-Communist. Then, if you put up the flag for nationalist China people start saying that isn't really the flag of China."

He said some people have settled the problem by staying away from official functions altogether.

He admitted that immigrants who have suffered under the communist regime don't take too kindly to the republican flag.

"But with time it will iron itself out," he said. "Most Chinese Canadians — the young people — are not interested in the dispute."

Children Return

Christine Horne, Caroline Vanderboor, Steven Nairne and Laurie Bunch were accompanied on their European trip by leader Miss Shirley Bell.

Victoria will be the site for a Summer Village in 1972.

GOODWILL AUCTION SET

Items offered for sale will be those considered to have collector's value because of age, not necessarily antiques, and will be sold to the highest bidder on a no-return, no-refund basis.

Lots are to consist of furniture, china, kitchen and household utensils, cameras, mounted telescope, compasses, woodworking tools, pictures and frames, radios, books, phonographs and assorted other items.

Each item will be marked with a starting price from which bidding will begin. The merchandise will be on display at 1:30 p.m. at 220 Bay Street, with the auction to start at 2 p.m.

City, Mayor, Police Defendants in Suit

VANCOUVER (CP) — Special and general damages are sought in a British Columbia Supreme Court action filed Thursday on behalf of a youth who claims his leg was broken by police during a riot in the Gastown area Saturday night.

Defendants in the action are the city, Mayor Tom Campbell, the Board of Police Commissioners, Police Chief John Fisk and Inspector Robert Abercrombie, who headed the police squad in the refurbished former skid road area Saturday.

The writ says injuries to Robert Stewart Elliott, 16, of Thunder Bay, Ont., were caused when he was attacked by members of the city police force.

Some 79 persons were arrested during the altercation, billed as a "Grasstown smoke-in" to protest police enforcement of drug laws in the boutique and restaurant area. Thirty-eight were charged, most of them with causing a disturbance.

Meanwhile Gastown's invitation-only block party lost its exclusive overtones Thursday and plans were being made for a gathering of thousands.

Ed Keate, a restaurant owner and spokesman for the Gastown Merchant's Association, said Vancouver city hall not only approved plans for the party but issued a permit for enough street room for thousands to gather.

Invitations had been issued to 100 policemen and their wives or girlfriends, 300 street people, merchants and the news media. The party was to have been held in a decorated parking garage. "Instead of a closed-shop party for some 700 . . . we extend an invitation to all interested parties," said Keate.

Although no demonstrations were scheduled for the forthcoming party, a series of demonstrations was tentatively planned to take place at Vancouver city hall on days of council meetings "until our demands are met."

Demands included a community-controlled police force and the establishment of a permanent civilian review board to replace the police commission.

Such a board would be empowered to "dismiss all officers guilty of exercising unlawful and brutal tactics during Saturday's disturbance," which saw 79 arrested and 38 charged.

Forestry Course Set

Malaspina College will be able to offer a forestry course as planned this year due to a grant from a private fund.

The course was in danger because of a lack of funds, but college president Dr. Carl Opgaard said $3,500 had been received from the George Allister McKay Fund and another $100 from Western Forestry Industries of Honeymoon Bay.

The $3,600 qualified the college for a provincial-federal grant since 20 per cent of the capital cost of the program has now been raised. The grant is for $14,400.

McKay was a carpenter from Chemainus who stipulated in his will that his estate be used for educational purposes. Opgaard said this is the first time in B.C. that a college program has been initiated as a result of a grant from the private sector of the community.

Car Crash Victims Identified

HOPE (CP) — An Oregon man, his small son and a Vancouver woman were identified today as those fatally injured Wednesday in a two-car collision on the Trans-Canada Highway four miles west of here.

Killed in the crash were Chester Brill Sorensen, 35, of Roseberg, Ore., Ivan Sorensen, 3, and Sylvia Pateman, 18, of Vancouver, a passenger in the other car.

Sorensen's wife, Phyllis, and their other two children, Beth, 5 and Eric, 7, were in fair condition in hospital.

Police also released the name of two persons killed in a collision six hours earlier on the Trans-Canada Highway one mile north of Hope.

He was identified as Frank Etherudge Tweed, 49, of Visalia, Calif. His wife, Kathleen, 44, was in satisfactory condition in hospital here.

A male passenger in the other car, which carried B.C. license plates also was killed. His name was withheld.

New, Old Varieties on Display

By HILDA BEASTALL

Out-of-town visitors and those from far-off places on the continent should find several feet of color film usefully employed in recording new and old varieties of gladioli and dahlias in this weekend's flower show.

Hilda

A new location has been chosen for the British Columbia Centennial show by Victoria Gladiolus and Dahlia Society. This year the members will make their summer display of flowers in the Esquimalt Sports Centre on Esquimalt Road.

The show will open Saturday at 2, remaining open until 10 p.m.

Sunday visitors can see this colorful event from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m.

Since the show features the two extremes of flower form the elongated spikes of glads and roundly symmetrical blooms of dahlias — a unique effect may be achieved in overall presentation.

A gardener not familiar with either group of plants will discover size alone is no point of excellence.

The form of each floret on a gladiolus spike must be absolutely true to the variety; all must be exactly in the same plane, that is, facing outwards; all must be in perfect condition with a designated number open and the remainder in a straight slender taper to the tip.

Miniature gladioli are sure to find favor for both home flower arrangements and small-garden decoration.

A half dozen corms of one color will brighten a partly shaded shrub bed for a week or two. Always plant glads in groups — never in a single row along a walk or a house foundation.

You will notice the word is gladiolus for one plant or flower; the plural is gladioli. Just a nicety of gardening to remember when talking to the experts at the show. But you can always say "glads."

Dahlias are something else again. These are quite ornamental even before any blooms open. The quantity of healthy leaves on well branched plants from late spring make dahlias useful as garden decoration as well as providing a continuity of cut blooms.

Colors and forms have been enormously increased in the last 30 years, so that anyone unfamiliar with the genus needs to see this show to believe what can be done by hybridizing.

Dalea is the name of a grey desert shrub inhabiting the hot sandy areas of the southern U.S. and Mexico.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED KARPIN

In 1957, a team of unknowns captured the World Championship the first time. They were called "lucky," despite their excellent bidding and play. In 1958, they again won the title. This time it was said by some that the victors just couldn't be that lucky or that good; and statements were heard that the winners were cheating. But after 10 consecutive wins in World Championship play, and their subsequent retirement from international competition, it was finally appreciated by all that their victories were due to superior ability.

The team I speak of is the Italian "Blue" team which, without a doubt, was the finest bridge aggregation the world has ever seen. Their record speaks for itself. And yet, seeing them perform throughout the years, one would wonder how on earth they could consistently come up with inspirational plays that were beyond the comprehension of other expert bridge players.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
2♠	Pass	3♣	3♡
Pass	4♡	Pass	Pass
Pass

Opening lead: Queen of ♠.

West's two-spade opening was the "weak two bid," showing a six card suit and 6-12 points. A low spade was played from dummy on West's opening lead, East's ace winning. Siniscalco now pondered for a full two minutes — and then led a diamond! Forquet ruffed and came back with the spade jack, East ruffing dummy's king. Another diamond was then led, West trumping. When Forquet later made his trump ace, declarer was down two.

Siniscalco's diamond lead at trick two is difficult to comprehend. As he looked at his hand and dummy, he saw nine diamonds and nine clubs. If West were void of either of these suits, it was a 50-50 proposition as to whether that suit was diamonds or clubs. But clubs seemed the better return to make, since West could have had the club ace for his opening bid. And, upon winning with that (presumed) card, West could return a spade, enabling East to ruff away dummy's king.

How come Siniscalco chose to return a diamond instead of a club? I do not know. If I did, I would be making these plays in World Championships, instead of writing about them.

No story today! This is No. 4960 in the FWF series, so we'll have a Magic Square based on that number.

What's a Magic Square? It's an array of numbers in square formation. For today's Magic Square they will be consecutive whole numbers. And each column, each row, and each of the two diagonals must add up to 4960.

The smallest number in the array will obviously be greater than one. What will the smallest and greatest numbers be?

RUNNING OUT OF WATER? Not at all—canoeists always do a final sprint and this Manitoba canoe team raced its way to victory. Running and carrying a canoe at the same time obviously requires a fine co-ordination of leg action. Last leg of the Centennial canoe race ended on the legislature lawn Thursday evening.

North, South Tempers Rise

Irish Crisis Spreads

Times News Services

BELFAST, Northern Ireland — Premier Brian Faulkner said today his government has broken all links with the government of the Irish Republic.

Faulkner made the announcement following a call by Irish Republic Prime Minister Jack Lynch for the resignation of the Faulkner government. Lynch urged an equal voice in the North Ireland government for the Catholic minority and the Protestant majority.

Tempers between the two countries rose as Roman Catholic refugees continue to flee south into the mainly Catholic Irish Republic.

But violence seemed to be on the wane after four days of shooting and firebombing. The death toll stood at 25.

Brig. Marston Tickell, army chief of staff in Northern Ireland, hailed the quiet today as an outright defeat of the IRA.

Faulkner denounced Lynch for calling for a new government in Northern Ireland and accused him of backing the outlawed Irish Republican Army in seeking the downfall of Faulkner's administration.

"Indeed, Mr. Lynch now clearly commits himself and his government to support by political means what the IRA seeks to achieve by violent means — the overthrow of the Northern Ireland government," the Northern Ireland premier said.

MAN SLAIN

A man died in a shooting incident in Londonderry Thursday night, and another was killed in a gunbattle with British troops in the Roman Catholic Bogside district. The army said its troops were ambushed and returned the fire. A pistol was found beside the dead man, the army said.

Two incidents in Belfast Thursday night caused fear that the IRA may be launching a new type of terrorism.

JORDAN ISOLATED IN LATEST ARAB ROW

The escalating bitterness between Syria and Jordan was prompted by border clashes in the last three days between the two countries. For details see story on Page 2.

Damascus said that along with cutting diplomatic ties, Jordan is being denied access to the Mediterranean Sea and its planes banned from Syrian air space.

In recent months, Iraq, Libya and Algeria have all severed relations with Hussein's regime in Amman. Hussein's only Arab ally is Saudi Arabia.

Air Fare Price War Now Thought Certain

MONTREAL (CP)—Five airlines believe a price war benefitting North Atlantic passengers will continue following the breakdown of negotiations for a new fares package.

Aer Lingus, the Irish state airline, announced Friday sharp cuts on flights between North America and Ireland purchased three months in advance.

On Thursday, Air Canada, CP Air, BOAC of Britain, and Lufthansa of West Germany said they intended to introduce cut-rate fares.

Earlier this summer, most airlines flying the North Atlantic route introduced round-trip fares of about $300 for youths, in an attempt to meet strong competition from charter operators.

A meeting by 40 airline members of the International Air Transport Association began in Montreal June 29 to hammer out a new rate structure for the North Atlantic routes but the talks broke down Wednesday after 44 days when Lufthansa cast a sole dissenting vote against a fares package that featured cheaper excursion and youth fares.

BYPASS IATA

The five airlines then announced plans to go ahead with their own lower rates outside the IATA structure.

Lufthansa has until Sept. 1 to change its mind and passengers might have to wait until Feb. 1 for new rates if the West German airline maintains its position. If it accepts the package instead, new rates would come into effect April 1.

Aer Lingus fares for passengers who book three months in advance for a 22-to-45-day stay in Europe will be $189 off season and $239.04 at peak holiday times for a New York-Dublin flight.

The current regular economy return fare between Dublin and New York is $500. From Montreal it is $487.

Airline and IATA prices are quoted in U.S. funds.

At a news conference Thursday, H. Don Reynolds, chairman of the conference, held under the auspices of the International Air Transport Association, said Lufthansa's position was "so rigid" that there was no further room for negotiation.

The airline was given until Sept. 1 to make its final decision known. If its rejection

Canoeists' Last Leg to City Provides Colorful Spectacle

It was a grand show.

No matter that one of the Yukon crew tested the saltchuck during the final sprint. Or that somebody shipped a bit of crass commercialism into the commentator's patter.

They were lined up three and four-deep around the Causeway and Inner Harbor Thursday night when, shortly after 7 p.m., 12 voyageur canoes, representing Canada's 10 provinces and two territories paddled in to end a 632-mile trip from Ft. St. James, through the interior and across the Strait of Georgia to Victoria.

"There you have the equality of our country, ladies and gentlemen," intoned the announcer as the 12 canoes went into an intricate circle manoeuvre before the final sprint.

"There are no sharp corners — we're all Canadians."

The Manitoba crew, with 146 points total, was over-all winner after Thursday night's sprint, the last of 12. New Brunswick's entry, first over the finish line in the Victoria sprint, finished second over all with 144 points followed by: Quebec, 140; B.C., 131; Ontario, 126; Northwest Territories, 111; Saskatchewan, 95; Yukon, 89; Alberta, 69; Nova Scotia, 39½; Prince Edward Island, 38; and Newfoundland, 37½.

The B.C. Centennial Canoe Pageant was sponsored by the federal state department, which provided $3,500 in prize money to be divided on a pro rata basis between the 12 teams competing.

The hapless Yukon paddler who hit the drink during the sprint, Robert Sharp of Whitehorse, said it was a result of a tricky bit of strategy as the canoes rounded the turn between the Causeway and the Johnson St. Bridge.

The canoes jammed, he said, his crew switched sides and "all of a sudden there were five on one side of the canoe and only myself on the other. I was pulling so hard I pulled myself right out of the canoe."

PICKED UP

He was picked up by a safety boat none the worse for his dip in the harbor.

Starkell is no newcomer to the canoe marathon world. He was captain of the Manitoba team in the Montreal-New York race in 1966 and the centennial race from Rocky Mountain House, Alta., to Montreal in 1967.

W. P. Stewart, chief of the English division, state department information services, travelled with the centennial canoe pageant through its entire route.

And he wasn't altogether happy with things. "From what some of the local centennial committees did," he said, "we pretty well had to have people there or nobody would have known about the pageant at all."

The smaller centres along the route, he said, were fine. But support in Vancouver, for example, was poor.

11-CENT RISE BREAKS TREND

Times News Services

OTTAWA — If your food bill was $13.30 in June, you had to pay $13.41 for the same items in July.

That increase of 11 cents may not sound too high, but it broke a long spell of food price stability.

One year ago in July the same food bill would have been $13.05, and in 1961 $10.

The cost of living index, which looks at more than 300 consumer goods and services, stands at one-third higher than it was 10 years ago.

★ ★ ★

Food prices jumped by a remarkable 2.2 per cent last month. For the past several months, food prices have been generally lower than a year ago, but this sunny period was ended by the sharp July increase.

All indexes are based on a monthly sampling survey across the country and include items purchased regularly.

It can be expected that fresh vegetable prices will come down as soon as Canadian crops are harvested.

Housing costs, one-third of the index, also rose considerably last month, mainly because of new house prices and higher rents. Textiles and electricity also are higher.

SHIPS FACE MONTH IN HOLDING PATTERN

Empty U.S. freighters are clogging Island ports while longshoremen continue to give priority to Canadian cargoes in the seventh week of the U.S. west coast dock strike.

Shipping officials say the American vessels may face delays of a month or more before longshoremen at Ladysmith and Cowichan Bay get around to working on them. (See story Page 15).

Meanwhile, the San Francisco local of the longshoremen's union has started a campaign which might get negotiations under way again in the dispute.

Talks on local port rules are scheduled to resume Monday between Bay area longshoremen and the Pacific Maritime Association.

5 Deputy Ministers Appointed by PM

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau today announced the appointment of five new deputy ministers, while appointing an existing deputy minister, J. H. Warren, Canadian high commissioner in London.

Mr. Warren, a native of Chatham, Ont., and now deputy minister of industry, trade and commerce, will replace Charles Ritchie, who is retiring.

Mr. Ritchie, born in Halifax and 65 next month, has been high commissioner here since 1967. He now is on holiday in Nova Scotia.

Mr. Warren, 50, known as Jake, has been deputy minister since 1964. He has had considerable experience in international affairs including attendance at meetings of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade on Canada's behalf.

Mr. Ritchie, a long-time career diplomat, has had many major posts in the Canadian diplomatic service including deputy undersecretary of state for external affairs, ambassador to West Germany and to the United States and representative for Canada at the United Nations.

FIRE BLOWS UP ALONG WITH BRIDGE

HOPE (CP) — A sudden forest fire in the Fraser Canyon was getting special attention from the army Thursday.

It started in tinder dry forest when the third field squadron blew up an unused bridge.

About 125 men from Chilliwack in the Fraser Valley 60 miles east of Vancouver and a helicopter from FCB Comox were working under the supervision of forestry officials to contain the blaze. Extent of it was not known.

The bridge on the Old Dewdney Trunk Road was across the Coquihalla River about 36 miles east of here. The demolition job was successful.

FRIDAY THE 13TH BIT PURE BUNK—OR IS IT?

LONDON (AP) — So it's Friday the 13th and nobody believes that old bunk. Except:

Kim Hughes of Steeple Ashton won a beauty contest with a week's holiday and a chance to compete for $2,400 and fame. She learned today she was disqualified after judges discovered she is only 14. The minimum age is 18.

Over in Peterport on the channel island of Guernsey, the police called in a locksmith. They had slammed the office safe shut and didn't know how to open it.

Up in Lancashire in the north, police faced a dilemma. A report came in that traffic on the express highway was being blocked by an exceedingly slow travellers on the inside slow lane. They rushed out and found the culprit to be a turtle which escaped from his master, nine-year-old Mark Williams.

Richard Bromley-Davenport went to a fancy dress ball dressed as an army intelligence officer. He got picked up for impersonating an officer and paid $48 costs for a quick hearing and a sympathetic discharge.

So it's Friday the 13th and for some it can't get over soon enough.

15 FAMILIES AWARDED $700,000

CALGARY (CP) — A $1.5 million suit, filed in 1965 by 15 Pincher Creek, Alta., families, has been settled out of court for $700,000.

The dispute involved Shell Canada Ltd. and Gulf Canada Ltd. who were accused of causing nuisance and damage to Pincher Creek residents.

The families alleged that the gas plants in the area had polluted the atmosphere causing a nuisance and in some cases, a threat to health.

Lillooet, Cranbrook Fire Menace Fades

VANCOUVER (CP) — Enormous tracts of British Columbia timberland are aflame today in a mounting forest fire crisis, but the siege was lifted on two fire-menaced communities hundreds of miles apart.

The potential disaster points had been Lillooet, a Fraser Canyon community of 1,800 and, to a lesser degree, the 13,000-population city of Cranbrook near the Alberta border.

On Wednesday night at Lillooet, 120 miles northeast of Vancouver, an Indian church and 12 homes were destroyed when fire roared into the west end of the village.

Thursday, fire erupted suddenly in a timbered area northwest of Cranbrook and caused short-lived concern. Driven by brisk winds, it swept over 40 acres before it was brought under control.

No homes were damaged, although it penetrated within one-half mile of the city limits.

Meanwhile, forest ranger Superintendent Jack Cawston said at Lillooet that carelessness was the probable cause of the fire which threatened to wipe the village off the map.

"While no conclusive evidence was found," he said, "it is most probable that the fire was caused from a discarded match or cigarette butt of a careless smoker."

Uvic Students Will Increase

A slight increase in the number of students at the University of Victoria can be expected this year, according to figures released Thursday by admissions officer Ron Jeffels.

Jeffels said about 5,200 students are expected to be on campus Dec. 1, the day population statistics are compiled.

Jeffels said the Uvic situation is indicative of "a general trend in universities across North America. We appear to be on a plateau right now."

Also affecting the figures, he said, is the opening this year of Camosun College, which will take first and second year students.

"There is also an economic stress factor at work," he said. Students may apply and then find it impossible to attend later, due to financial problems."

Jeffels said students these days are placing more emphasis on gaining experience before taking a university education, and often hope to gain that experience by travelling throughout the world.

"There is the tendency of students to delay their university education for a year or two. Many say their university education will become more valuable after they become experienced. It's part of the new existentialist philosophy. They say: 'I want experience before I want essence.'"

6,000 NOTICES

Jeffels said about 6,000 notices of admission and re-registration had been sent out to prospective students, of which about 5,500 are expected to register in early September.

The attrition rate, he said, is largely due to students "double-banking" — also applying at other universities to afford a better choice.

Of those 5,500, another 300 are expected to drop out before Dec. 1 for various reasons.

Jeffels said 285 graduate students are expected to attend Uvic this year, the same number as last year.

. . . IRISH CRISIS

homes of two Belfast businessmen and sprinkled gasoline over their furniture and set it on fire. A fire department spokesman said damage to both homes was extensive.

It was feared the two incidents might be the start of a campaign of personal intimidation by the IRA, who have found themselves outgunned by the British Army and are reported to be short of arms and ammunition.

Cabinet ministers, judges, industrialists and top-ranking army and police officers were rumored to be on a list for similar IRA action.

Troops and roaming gunmen in Belfast exchanged shots but no casualties were reported. Four explosions occurred in the town of Newry, near the Irish border, and a frontier roadblock at Aughnacloy, County Tyrone, was peppered by a dozen shots from the Irish side of the border.

The News Letter, a Belfast morning paper catering to Ulster's Protestant majority, expressed outrage at Lynch's remarks and said they constitute "an affront to civilized society."

Sources in London said they believe the British government will reject Lynch's proposals. Prime Minister Edward Heath is reported determined to see the 12,500 troops in Northern Ireland restore order before he considers any political action.

More than 6,000 Catholics are estimated to have fled to the Irish Republic and the Dublin government expects the number to reach at least 10,000 by Saturday.

Two thousand Protestants also have left their homes in Belfast and taken shelter in schools, churches and other public buildings.

The British Red Cross flew in supplies of blankets, diapers and pillows to Belfast. Food stocks are running dangerously low, and long lines form outside bakeries each morning to get what bread is available.

'Paper Tiger' Prowls Again

By BRIAN BUTTERS

President Nixon's planned visit to China is an example of "the famous American paper tiger" in action, ex-missionary and China expert Dr. James Endicott said today.

The chairman of the Canadian Peace Council said in an interview that Nixon's visit is "an admission of the failure of American policy in dealing with China over the years."

"It's the old John Foster Dulles policy, which recommended the non-recognition of the regime of Chiang Kai-shek and the surrounding of China with peripheral armies," he said. "It's incredible how unrealistic the American analysis of China has been."

THROUGH MOTIONS

Endicott said the move by Nixon is also motivated politically, that Nixon hopes to get re-elected by going through the motions with China.

But Endicott added that the China visit indicates some groundwork has been laid in China-U.S. relations.

It is now probable, he said, that China will be allowed into the United Nations — "they wouldn't have agreed to the visit without that" — and that the U.S. definitely plans to withdraw its trops from Vietnam.

Endicott spent 22 years in China as a missionary, and another two as an official adviser to the government of Chiang Kai-shek. But he later decided that the nationalists were wrong in their views and sided with the revolutionary element in China.

He said he is a personal friend of Chinese Premier Chou En-lai and has met and talked to Mao Tse-tung.

What kind of a man is Mao?

"He's a philosopher, and also a shrewd and capable organizer," Endicott said, "a combination which is not seen very frequently."

He said Mao has been successful in integrating the basic philosophy of Marxism into the Chinese framework of Confucius-based beliefs.

Endicott said the Russians have been "very stupid in their attitude toward China. "They're still under the impression that Mao's cultural revolution was a failure, that millions of Chinese are starving."

"Now hundreds of people are going there and seeing this is not true. They are proving the Russians wrong."

BLUNDER

"I think Trudeau panicked," he said. "They had all that was necessary in the Criminal Code to round up anyone guilty of criminal acts. The War Measures Act was unnecessary."

"They had the chance to arrest anyone they wanted and yet they didn't pick up a single member of the Mafia. So whom do they arrest? Members of our peace committee."

He said the federal government's action in the Quebec crisis was a "warning to the people of Quebec that we could compel them by force to stay in Confederation. If we did compel them, it would be disastrous."

Does Endicott consider himself a Communist? "I'm not a Communist, but a liberal Christian reformer, with roots in the Bible," he said. "I'm for social justice, especially for the poor. My sympathies lean toward Marxism but I don't call myself a Marxist."

The Canadian Peace Council has about 200,000 sympathizers, he said, who advocate abolition of nuclear weapons and believe that a military solution is not possible for the world's problems. Any type of imperialism, such as the actions of the U.S. in Southeast Asia, is also not acceptable, he said.

Endicott is in Victoria to speak to a public meeting at 8 tonight at The Inn, 1526 Cook Street. He has several other speaking engagements in B.C. before returning to his Toronto home.

. . . DEPUTY

Mr. Warren joined the external affairs department in 1945 and served in the high commissioner's office here between 1948 and 1951. He also was in the Canadian embassy at Washington between 1954 and 1957 before joining the finance department.

Mr. Warren will be replaced by J. F. Grandy, Who has been deputy minister of consumer and corporate affairs since that department's inception in 1967. Mr. Grandy, 52, had previously served in the external affairs department and for a time was an assistant deputy minister of finance.

A new deputy minister of consumer and corporate affairs will be announced later, the prime minister said in a statement.

J. Douglas Love, now deputy minister of labor, is moved to the same position in the department of regional economic expansion. He replaces Tom Kent, who was recently appointed to the Cape Breton Development Corporation.

Bernard Wilson, now an assistant deputy minister of labor, moves up to replace Mr. Love.

Mr. Warren will succeed Mr. Ritchie Oct. 1, when Mr. Grandy will also move into the trade and industry department. The other appointments are effective Sept. 1.

Syria Heavily Reinforcing Its Troops on Jordan Border

By The Canadian Press

Reuters news agency said reports received in Beirut, Lebanon, from Damascus said Syria is heavily reinforcing its troops along the Jordanian frontier. Columns of tanks were seen taking up positions in the border areas and other tanks, as well as troops and artillery, were on their way there.

Damascus radio said Jordanian troops opened tank and artillery fire on military and civilian positions, adding that five Jordanian tanks were destroyed.

The Jordanian government said earlier it had inflicted heavy losses on an unidentified force which had attacked Jordanian positions along the Syrian border.

Meanwhile, there were rumors in Amman that Syrian aircraft were being used in the border against Jordanians.

It was the third straight day the two armies battled. Relations started deteriorating last month when King Hussein cracked down on Palestinian Arab guerrillas in Jordan.

LACKED CONTROL

Jordan said the border clash Thursday that led Syria to break relations was caused by Syria's failure to keep a tight rein on the guerrillas.

A government spokesman, broadcasting over Amman Radio, said the fighting between Jordanian and Syrian forces Thursday was "regrettable but resulted from mounting and increased guerrilla raids across the border this week."

Syria closed its border with Jordan last month to protest King Hussein's successful crackdown on the guerrillas. On Thursday it became the third Arab country to sever relations with Jordan. Libya and Algeria did so earlier this year, and on July 19 Iraq closed its border with Jordan and barred all flights to and from Jordan over Iraqi air space.

The Jordan spokesman said his government proposed that a joint committee be formed to investigate the border incidents but Syria vetoed the plan.

Syria's official Radio Damascus said that the Jordanian tanks and armored cars opened fire Thursday on the Syrian border town of Dar'a, but the broadcast said the attack was beaten back with the loss of four Jordanian tanks. The report said a Jordanian armored car ran over a wounded Syrian soldier and killed him.

The Jordanian spokesman said the fighting began when "a force whose identity could not be determined advanced toward Jordanian positions and opened fire."

"Our forces returned fire in self-defence and damaged five attacking tanks and two artillery positions. There were no casualties."

The Jordanian reference to an unidentified force appeared to be a suggestion that units of the 8,000-man Palestinian Liberation Army, which has bases in southern Syria, were to blame for the fighting.

. . . AIR

still stood at that time, the IATA membership would face an "open rate" situation or, in effect, price warfare.

As he was making his remarks, Air Canada and BOAC were announcing their intention to seek introduction of the lower fares regardless of whether Lufthansa came into line or an open rate situation developed.

Along with U.S. carriers Trans World Airlines and Pan American Airways, the two airlines were in the vanguard of those attending the conference in their support of a cut-rate 90-day advance purchase.

Such a fare, aimed at the vacation trade, was eventually included in the fares package and was priced at less than $200 round trip between Western Europe and the Eastern North America.

It was designed to compete with the independent charter airlines which have been gobbling up much of the scheduled airlines' business in recent years.

OUTLINES INTENTIONS

In his statement, Yves Pratte, chairman of Air Canada, said:

"If . . . there is no industry agreement by Sept. 1, it is still our intention to file rates is accordance with our proposals.

By Thursday night, CP Air had joined the fray. H. Bryan Renwick, vice-president of marketing and sales, announced the airline would apply to the Canadian government for fares similar to those voted on at the IATA conference.

Meantime, Lufthansa appeared to be adamant in its opposition to the fares package following the collapse of the talks. In a statement issued from its head offices in Cologne, the airline said:

"In case it comes to an open rate situation, as looks possible, Lufthansa will offer its own tariffs which will mean an all-round simplification and reduction."

Blitzkrieg Fear Grips Uruguay

By CHRISTOPHER ROPER

MONTIVIDEO, Uruguay (The Manchester Guardian) — Although Uruguay is one of the smallest countries in the western hemisphere — with less land and fewer inhabitants than the southernmost state of neighboring Brazil — its problems preoccupy the entire continent. One suggestion discussed by intelligent citizens in Montevideo is that Brazil may be preparing a unilateral solution to Uruguay's chronic political crisis.

The newspaper Marcha carried its front cover recently the banner headline: "Brazil Threatens to Invade." Basing its information on a report alleged to have been sent by the Argentine ambassador in Rio de Janeiro to his government, the report describes "Operation Thirty Hours" — which is the time the Brazilian general staff estimates they would require to reach Montevideo from the northern border and establish themselves.

This "blitzkrieg" would be sufficiently rapid to prevent international opinion or the United States, from bringing pressure on Brazil to desist until the occupation was complete. Certainly the Uruguayan armed forces would be hard pressed to hold the Brazilians for 24 hours, let alone 30.

Laughter Normal Reaction

It must be admitted that it is harder to find Brazilians who take the idea seriously than Uruguayans. In Montevideo, few will dismiss the possibility and on the left it is firmly believed to be probable in the event of a left-wing victory in the November elections.

In Brazil, the normal reaction is laughter. If pressed some will admit that the possibility has been considered by sectors of the armed forces. They dismiss the fact that an invasion has been advocated by one of Brazil's two leading newspapers — the Estado do Sao Paulo — as the routing of the extreme right.

The truth is hard to come by. But Marcha's reports can never be dismissed light-heartedly. Certainly the past six months have seen unusual diplomatic activity and manoeuvre, which is best explained by the situation created by the victory of Unidad Popular, and the emergence of an Andean block on the one hand, and the deteriorating situation in Uruguay on the other.

Argentina Increasingly Nervous

Argentina is undoubtedly increasing nervous in the face of Brazil's growing power. The recent meeting between President Alejandro Lanusse of Argentina and President Salvador Allende of Chile must be seen in a geo-political rather than an ideological context.

Argentina is busy mending fences with all its neighbors in order to stand united against what it considers to be the growing threat of Brazilian power — power which would be consolidated if Brazil took possession of Uruguay.

Perhaps the truth is that a contingency plan for the invasion of Uruguay does exist. To justify an invasion — should it be necessary — Brazil has been seeking, without much success as yet, a pan-American treaty guaranteeing a united front against terrorism.

Argentina knows that such a plan exists and is preparing for all contingencies. The Marcha report may be exaggerating when it suggests that the decision to invade has already been taken by Brazil, and that the government is united in this resolve. One reason against the thesis is that Brazil is desperately anxious to secure a befter international image.

Priority to Secure Unity

Furthermore, at recent Latin-American meetings it has been a Brazilian priority to secure Latin-American unity in relation to the United States in pursuit of economic concessions. Such a policy could be irreparably damaged by an invasion of Uruguay.

Marcha's argument that Brazil would use the victory of the left-wing Frente Amplio in November as sufficient excuse for intervention seems unlikely. However, if one admits that a contingency plan probably exists — if only from recent Argentine initiatives — one has to consider what the contingency might be.

One might be the defeat of the Frente Amplio leading to heightened activity by the Tupamaro urban guerrillas, to a virtual state of civil war on Uruguay — which cannot yet be said to exist.

However, this does not seem very likely either; whoever wins the elections, it is unlikely that any of the three groupings — the Colorados (the government), the Blancos, and the Frente Amplio — will have a working majority. The situation would take months, at least, to crystallize.

Stay Within Constitution

Supporters of the Frente Amplio are determined to work within the constitutional framework for as long as possible.

This suggests a third possibility: General Liber Seregni, the Frente Amplio's non-Marxist presidential candidate, has said that if the government interrupted the constitutional process and prevented the elections from taking place the Frente Amplio — comprosing the Christian Democrat, Communist, and Socialist parties, with splinter groups of dissident Blancos and Colorados — would take such measures as were necessary.

He did not elaborate but one local journalist said he did not think the government would be able to impose a dictatorship, as the unions were too effectively organized. General strikes in recent weeks, called without the benefit of any press or radio coverage or announcement, have been 99 per cent effective.

A newspaper cartoon following the last strike showed the president saying: "Yesterday's strike was a failure; except in Uruguay, everyone worked."

Seregni believes that the massive response of the people to any new attempt by President Jorge Pacheco Areco to prolong his mandate would be to resist by every means to hand.

Certainly the president has not respected the constitution in recent weeks: following the lifting of the hated special powers by a joint session of congress the president reimposed them by decree within six hours.

For this he faced impeachment, which was approved by the necessary two thirds of the chambers of deputies, but just failed in the senate.

LEAVE CANADA, INDIAN TOLD

VANCOUVER (CP) — Gurcharanjit Singh Atwal, 20, was ordered in provincial court Thursday to return to India by midnight Monday after being convicted of conspiring to bring immigrants into Canada by giving false and misleading information.

He was given a suspended sentence after admitting he played a part in arranging marriages between other accused men and female impersonators. Marriage to a Canadian would help the men pass immigration requirements.

His lawyer, David Gibbons, said Atwall handed over payments to female impersonators for going through marriage ceremonies with immigrants, but was not himself paid.

Corey Stolte, justice department prosecutor, said Atwal coached participants in the marriage ceremonies to give misleading statements to immigration officials.

* * *

He said Atwall played a minor role in an alleged conspiracy in which 38 persons have been charged.

Gibbons said his client, who came to Canada in 1699, was arrested Feb. 19 and didn't have a hearing until Thursday.

Atwal, he said was left without official status in Canada when his passport and immigration papers were taken from him, and lost all his savings.

Gibbons said his client didn't eat regularly and as a result spent 50 days in hospitals.

He said Atwal wants to leave Canada as soon as possible because he is being harassed by other East Indians.

"In fact, he has in effect been hiding in a rented room in New Westminster," Gibbons said.

N-Test Criticized

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thirty congressmen asked U.S. District Court Wednesday to forbe release of a secret government report they believe criticizes plans for underground nuclear tests at the Alaskan island of Amchitka.

Led by Representative Patsy Mink (D-Hawaii) the group had requested the Atomic Energy Commission to release the report. But, said a letter accompanying the lawsuit, presidential counsel John Dean III told Mrs. Mink the report was "prepared for the advice of the president."

Dean refused to submit the report findings to U.S. Congress because "they involve highly sensitive matter that is vital to our defence and foreign policy." The report was made by an interdepartmental committee headed by John Irwin undersecretary of state.

Full-Time Legal Aid Man Hoped

A full-time legal aid office will be estabtished in Greater Victoria — if the government will help financially, Mike Hutcheson, Victoria Bar Association legal aid committee spokesman said today.

Hutcheson said that following a Tuesday meeting between local aid represenatives and Frank Maczko, provincial director of legal aid, Maczko met Deputy Attorney-General Gilbert Kennedy. The results of that meeting, he added, were not yet known.

The VBA at its general meeting in May passed a resolution urging financial aid from the provincial and federal governments for a full-time legal aid system here.

Hutcheson said financing must be secured and a permanent location found to make the full-time office feasible. Cool-Aid has provided temporary office space at the 1900 Fernwood hostel.

With financing, the VBA would be able to hire a lawyer-administrator to look after all legal aid functions in the area.

The VBA for some years has offered a legal aid service locally for both criminal and civil matters financed primarily by the profession and staffed entirely by volunteers.

Free weekly clinics have been held twice a month in Victoria and Langford. The clinics are also staffed by volunteers.

CYCLIST SLAMS STALLED CAR

DUNCAN — A man is in good condition today in St. Joseph's Hospital, Victoria, after his motorbike crashed into a stalled car that was being pushed without lights across a road west of here Wednesday night.

Police said the cyclist, Paddy King, 410 Festubert St., Duncan, received a broken leg and cuts when he hit the car at about 9:30 p.m. on Lake Cowichan Road.

The spokesman said Don W. Ross of Duncan was pushing his car while a friend, who was not injured, was steering.

OLD REFRAIN

Come Now, Doctor Watch the Facts

Death is inevitable. Taxes are inevitable. Inevitable, too, is the British immigrant doctor preaching to Canadians on the evils of "socialized medicine." Heigh-ho. That's life.

Even so, I was astonished at the incredible yardage of newsprint gratuitously provided earlier this week on our good Page Five to a British immigrant doctor whose information was somewhat tired (five years out of date), whose prejudices were even narrower than others of his kind and whose motivation for breaking into the usually shunned glare of public opinion seems to have been a kind of outright blackmail.

What 33-year-old Dr. Brian S. Pound, of our town, is telling us, gentle reader, is that if the British Columbia government goes any further toward "socialized medicine" he will take off for other parts where things are done more to his liking. It cannot be considered as an idle threat, either. That's just what Dr. Pound did when he pulled out of Britain. "If we don't like it," he told our Don Vipond, "then it's up to us to get out," a contingency that does not appear to be included in the Hippocratic Oath.

Dr. Pound is not unusual since thousands of British doctors have been doing that in the 25 years since Britain's National Health Service assumed a world leadership in humanitarian medicine, but he does seem rather young and inexperienced to have made such a bold decision.

Indeed, most of his time in England appears to have been in training, for which the British taxpayer shelled out $22,500. (Dr. Pound told Vipond that it cost the state a mere $6,000 to give him the education that's earned him such rich rewards in British Columbia, but the official 1967 figure on state subsidies for doctor training in the United Kingdom was $22,500 per doctor; if that's what it cost to license Dr. Pound they sure as shootin' got a small return on the investment.)

It was a matter of conscience, Dr. Pound told Vipond, to rebel against Britain's "second rate" medicine and certainly one must agree that there is nothing "second rate" about his subsequent career as a general practitioner in Victoria. His listed income under B.C. Medicare was $41,452 two years ago, $53,291 last year. (Just once I'd like to meet a British doctor who left as a matter of conscience without instantly doubling or tripling his income.)

Apart from the background of his brief practice, Dr. Pound is in the classic tradition of such immigrants who so often justify the desertion of their nation and their patients by a paranoic attack on the British system and issue the warning that It Can Happen Here. To that, all I can say is (1) we should be so lucky and (2) isn't it just a teeny-weeny bit cheeky for this Johnny-Come-Lately to be threatening us if our elected representatives displease him?

Dr. Pound's main beef against the National Health Service is the familiar lament that the general practitioner is not given hospital privileges, that, as he told Vipond, "if you can't treat the patient with an aspirin you've got to refer him."

Even in those days when the young doctor was on the scene, that was patently untrue, as he surely knows. Then, and now, 90 per cent of all the nation's ills are treated in the British family doctor's surgery. Under the system the general practitioner is just exactly the primary diagnostician that he is in Canada, the difference being that the referral is made to a specialist when there is an operation to be performed in hospital.

There are two schools of thought on this. My own doctor in London was one of those who thought it the best system, hadn't used a knife in 20 years except for an occasional circumcision, and considered it only sensible logic that, whether it be a tonsillectomy or a lobotomy, surgery was for the specializing tecfinician. The point is that it is an arguable question. To let Dr. Pound get away with his one-sided, sweeping generalization can hardly be said to be objective reporting.

It must be said, as well, that Dr. Pound is either unaware of recent efforts to widen the function of the general practitioner in Britain or that he chose not to inform Vipond of this trend.

This has been the great story in Britain over the past few years, under both the Labor and Conservative governments. The aim has been to set up clinics and group practices, often in conjunction with local authority public health centres. Its success goes a long way to wiping out Dr. Pound's "asprin" argument.

This polyclinic idea, demonstrably effective in the Soviet Union and recommended in the first blueprint of the National Health Service, means that doctors may combine various specialties in obstetrics, pediatrics, geriatrics, chiropody and other fields, rent offices on the premises of health centres and use the centre's nursing and secretarial staff and diagnostic equipment.

In other cases, with the encouragement and financial assistance of the Ministry of Health, group practices, involving from three to 12 doctors, are replacing the old one-man operations.

When the service began in 1948 three of every four practices were single-handed. Now three of every four are group arrangements. There are new challenges, new rewards, including higher incomes. What Dr. Pound describes as "tremendous apathy" is simply not true.

What I am saying is that Dr. Pound, to my own knowledge, was not at all fair in his presentation of these facts. As for his opinion, I find it equally suspect. Any man who describes health as "a commodity" and the doctor's role as "free trade with his customers," is hardly qualified to judge a national medical scheme based on the philosophy that good health is every citizen's right. For all its faults, Britain's National Health Service is dedicated to that security — womb-to-tomb, as the saying goes — and may still serve as a model for a comprehensive plan in these climes.

If that means the disappearance of Dr. Pound to new climes — where? Hawaii, perhaps? — then so be it.

Police Called Irresponsible, Selfish As Council Assesses Work-to-Rule

The effects of police work-to-rule tactics on city revenue and the pay hike in excess of the amount budgetted will amount to more than $150,000—and the city should send taxpayers a special notice to remind them of it, council was told Thursday.

Lost revenue accounts for $70,000 of the total, according to a statement read to council by Acting Mayor Clyde Savage.

Savage also charged the union membership with violating its oath of office and its own union constitution.

He also criticized members of the force for what he called an attitude of irresponsibility and self-interest.

●

Council may decide to send citizens special tax notices covering the amount of money the union's work-to-rule policy will cost the city.

The wage settlement agreed to by the police commission and the union membership this week amounts to a compounded 18.2 per cent increase over 15 months.

Savage also said the Victoria police commission will "seek the support" of other core municipality commissions and the provincial government to prevent another similar occurance.

He said the police commission "will be re-examining its 1971 budget critically with the view to effecting all possible economies before approaching this council for extra funds."

Although receipts from provincial court fines for the last few months do not yet reflect the revenue loss, city officials reported to council the loss will eventually cost the city between $65,000 and $70,000.

In his statement, Savage said: "Although it has been reported that it was this loss of revenue that resulted in the Police Commission's aggreeing to such a generous settlement rather than appear before the B.C. Mediation Commission some weeks hence, this is not the case."

Savage added that if it were not for mediation officer, Clark Gilmour, "the matter would still be in dispute."

"While I cannot comprehend the logic that has led the very men in this community who are sworn to uphold the law to behave so irresponsibly as to violate their oath of office and their own union constitution in relation to a matter which is so obviously one of self interest, steps must be taken to prevent this happening again."

Figures attached to copies of Savage's statement showed that the number of traffic offences punishable by fines reported by the police dropped from 751 in March to 188 in April, 137 in May, seven in June and two in July.

Under that category are such offences as impaired driving, hit and run, dangerous driving and driving under suspension. It also includes speeding, stop sign and red light violations by people not using B.C. driving licences.

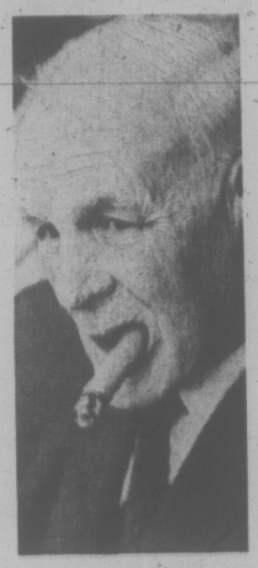
Reports of traffic violations punishable by demerit points also decreased: March, 722, April, 585, May, 440, June, 27, July, four. These include speeding, stop sign and red light violations by people holding B.C. licences.

Parking fines (not including meter violations) dropped to a total of 11 for July while normally there are about 60 such tickets made out every day.

Ald. Harold Olafson, appeared to receive agreement from other aldermen when he suggested that special tax notices be sent out to cover the amounts needed because of the revenue loss and the unexpectedly high pay settlement.

The notices should be sent, he said; "so the citizens know where the money's going."



SAVAGE

The city had allowed for a police pay settlement similar to that won by other civic employees, which amounted to a compounded 15 per cent increase over the life of a two-year contract.

Ald. Peter Pollen said he "heartily concurred" with Savage's remarks about the police union action, saying the contract "hasn't been negotiated in good faith" and the settlement is "completely unsupportable" in terms of the city's ability to pay.

Ald. Tom Christie said he thought the pay increase was "something colossal" and really amounts to 21 per cent over one year.

FEARSOME HYRAX — Don't be fooled by the small size and cuddly fur of the animal held by Brett Bergerud. That and the cute little beady eyes are a transparent coverup for terrorist activities involving large dogs, which he has a nasty habit of chasing, according to some residents of the Gordon Head area. Scientists say the hyrax, which was turned over to animal controller Colin Nelthorp, who thought he was a marmot, is related to the hoofed mammals. And everyone knows the devil is a hoofed mammal. 'Manipulation' of Law Criticized by Curtis

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis said today he is "very concerned" at the recent Greater Victoria police work-to-rule tactics employed prior to a contract settlement.

"I don't think the law of the land should be a point to be manipulated in a labor dispute," he said.

"The people of Greater Victoria should not feel the law is being manipulated."

Curtis, also chairman of the Saanich police commission, said he will be taking the matter up with the attorney-general and the Saanich Policemen's Association.

DETAILS COMING

He said he will release details next week on the effect of the police work-to-rule in Saanich.

Asked why he had not voiced criticism while the work-to-rule was in effect, he said "we didn't get our statistics that graphically until negotiations were in the late stages."

"This should be used as an object lesson to make sure it does not happen again."

Commenting on the 18.2 per cent salary raise in the 15-month contract, he said the kinds of increases won by police in large and small cities were examined.

PARITY DEFEATED

"We see in several cities very significant increases in police earnings, presumably indicating the strength of their argument — it's tougher work today than a few years ago, and various administrations recognize they have not been keeping pace.

"The principle of parity (with Greater Vancouver) has been defeated, as it should be."

Curtis agreed that the difference is narrowed slightly and said he would have preferred the difference to have been maintained.

(Greater Victoria police were $34 a month behind Greater Vancouver. This was narrowed to $26 a month, but mainland contracts will expire three months earlier and the last-stage increase was granted six months earlier than Greater Victoria.)

Pollen on Committee To Police Reid Plan

Ald. Peter Pollen has been appointed to sit on the committee that will decide on final details of the new Reid waterfront development approved in principle by council Thursday.

Pollen and community development chairman Ald. Harold Olafson were appointed to the committee when council formally adopted a motion setting out some guidelines for a redesigned version of the controversial project.

Pollen has led criticism of the earlier Reid proposal and was instrumental in formulating the new guidelines.

The committee will also include city hall planning officials, the developer and his architects.

Council also slightly altered the guidelines agreed to at informal council meeting earlier Thursday at which Reid was present.

Pollen said the public should be aware that the density of the new development will contain a floor-space ratio of 3.5:1 only if the 43,000 square feet of water lot is included in the figuring. The density on land alone would amount to 5.5:1 he said.

This and a guarantee that the developer will not build on the water lot were included in the guidelines.

Other guidlines formally agreed to included:

That the space required for parking below street level at Wharf Street be not included in the floor space ratio calculations.

"That the view of the Inner Harbor be maintained from street level at Wharf Street; and

ISLANDERS KEEP IT CLEAN

Police Crack Down on Litterbugs

The B.C. parks branch is cracking down on people who discard rubbish and garbage in provincial parks.

Lloyd Brooks, deputy minister of recreation and conservation, said today more than 30 persons have been convicted under the new Litter Act and hundreds of people cautioned.

The judges have imposed fines ranging from $50 to $100, he said. Maximum fine is $500.

Brooks said most of the offenders have been apprehended in the interior of the province. He knew of no litter conviction on Vancouver Island.

"I don't know if this is because RCMP there are more alert to the problem of litter or the open type of country makes it easier to spot offenders, he said. "But police have been instructed to enforce the law throughout the province."

CITY OFFENDERS PROSECUTED

Welfare Frauds Up to 7 Per Cent

Seven per cent of welfare cases in Victoria involve fraud, a city hall report says.

The figure compares with a two to three per cent fraud rate estimated five years ago, the report says.

Signed by welfare administrator F. A. Davidson, it says that since April of this year, about 400 cases have been investigated by a team of two social workers.

Of these, 32 were referred to the city police forces's fraud squad, and three were rejected by the prosecutor. The rest are being processed in court.

Davidson says when welfare fraud cases are taken to court, "this can involve a good deal of staff time in the witness box.

"It would be much more satisfactory if we had sufficient staff to visit and check out every case, so that the chance of fraud would be minimized."

He had requested information about welfare fraud at a recent council meeting.

The investigation was apparently carried out in response to a policy begun by Rehabilitation Minister P. A. Gaglardi, upon becoming minister promised to clear the "deadbeats" off the welfare rolls.

A covering letter attached to the report, written by city manager Bill Hooson, says the provincial government "recently conducted an audit of cases being administered by the city's department and I am advised that they have concluded that the city is taking all reasonable precautions to prevent the fraudulent dispersal of funds."

The report says that on April 16 two workers were sent out to visit homes and to work in the case assessment section of the office.

The workers were told to watch for both fraud and cases where a need had been overlooked. No report was given by Davidson on the latter.

Of the 29 cases before the court, Davidson said he has no up-to-date information about their progress.

Any fraudulent statements that result in overpayment are immediately turned over to the police fraud squad. Some cases — involving common-law relationships, wrong addresses, children out of the home and not reported — are adjusted by the welfare office, Davidson says.

"Fraud has been much more prevalent where a man is the head of a family group and is more likely to obtain work and not report earnings that by woman who is head of the family and is restricted because of her children.

"In the latter group where common-law situations exist, we have been successful in at least unearthing quite a number and getting the men to accept responsibility for the family."

BELFAST, Northern Ireland — Premier Brian Faulkner said today his government has broken all links with the government of the Irish Republic.

Faulkner made the announcement following a call by Irish Republic Prime Minister Jack Lynch for the resignation of the Faulkner government. Lynch urged an equal voice in the North Ireland government for the Catholic minority and the Protestant majority.

Tempers between the two countries rose as Roman Catholic refugees continue to flee south into the mainly Catholic Irish Republic.

But violence seemed to be on the wane after four days of shooting and firebombing. The death toll stood at 25.

BACKING IRA

Faulkner denounced Lynch for calling for a new government in Northern Ireland and accused him of backing the outlawed Irish Republican Army in seeking the downfall of Faulkner's administration.

"Indeed, Mr. Lynch now clearly commits himself and his government to support by political means what the IRA seeks to achieve by violent means — the overthrow of the Northern Ireland government," the Northern Ireland premier said.

A man died in a shooting incident in Londonderry Thursday night, and another was killed in a gunbattle with British troops in the Roman Catholic Bogside district. The army said its troops were ambushed and returned the fire. A pistol was found beside the dead man, the army said.

Two incidents in Belfast Thursday night caused fear that the IRA may be launching a new type of terrorism.

JORDAN ISOLATED IN LATEST ARAB ROW

The escalating bitterness between Syria and Jordan was prompted by border clashes in the last three days between the two countries. For details see story on Page 2.

Damascus said that along with cutting diplomatic ties, Jordan is being denied access to the Mediterranean Sea and its planes banned from Syrian air space.

In recent months, Iraq, Libya and Algeria have all severed relations with Hussein's regime in Amman. Hussein's only Arab ally is Saudi Arabia.

Air Fare Price War Now Thought Certain

MONTREAL (CP)—Five airlines believe a price war benefitting North Atlantic passengers will continue following the breakdown of negotiations for a new fares package.

Aer Lingus, the Irish state airline, announced today sharp cuts on flights between North America and Ireland purchased three months in advance.

On Thursday, Air Canada, CP Air, BOAC of Britain, and Lufthansa of West Germany said they intended to introduce cut-rate fares.

Earlier this summer, most airlines flying the North Atlantic route introduced round-trip fares of about $200 for youths, in an attempt to meet strong competition from charter operators.

A meeting by 40 airline members of the International Air Transport Association began in Montreal June 29 to hammer out a new rate structure for the North Atlantic routes, but the talks broke down Wednesday after 44 days when Lufthansa cast a sole dissenting vote against a fares package that featured cheaper excursion and youth fares.

BYPASS IATA

The five airlines then announced plans to go ahead with their own lower rates outside the IATA structure.

Lufthansa has until Sept. 1 to change its mind and passengers might have to wait until Feb. 1 for new rates if the West German airline maintains its position. If it accepts the package instead, new rates would come into effect April 1.

At a news conference Thursday, H. Don Reynolds, chairman of the conference, held under the auspices of the International Air Transport Association, said Lufthansa's position was "so rigid" that there was no further room for negotiation.

The airline was given until Sept. 1 to make its final decision known. If its rejection

Canoeists' Last Leg to City Provides Colorful Spectacle

It was a grand show.

No matter that one of the Yukon crew tested the salt-chuck during the final sprint. Or that somebody slipped a bit of crass commercialism into the commentator's patter.

They were lined up three and four-deep around the Causeway and Inner Harbor Thursday night when, shortly after 7 p.m., 12 voyageur canoes, representing Canada's 10 provinces and two territories paddled in to end a 632-mile trip from Fort St. James, through the interior and across the Strait of Georgia to Victoria.

"There you have the equality of our country, ladies and gentlemen," intoned the announcer as the 12 canoes went into an intricate circle manoeuvre before the final sprint. "There are no sharp corners — we're all Canadians."

The Manitoba crew, with 146 points total, was over-all winner after Thursday night's sprint, the last of 12. New Brunswick's entry, first over the finish line in the Victoria sprint, finished second over-all with 144 points followed by: Quebec, 140; B.C., 131; Ontario, 126; Northwest Territories, 111; Saskatchewan, 95; Yukon, 89; Alberta, 69; Nova Scotia, 39½; Prince Edward Island, 38; and Newfoundland, 37½.

The B.C. Centennial 71 Canoe Pageant was sponsored by the federal state department, which provided $3,500 in prize money to be divided on a pro rata basis between the 12 teams competing.

The hapless Yukon paddler who hit the drink during the sprint, Robert Sharp of Whitehorse, said it was a result of a tricky bit of strategy as the canoes rounded the turn between the Causeway and the Johnson St. Bridge.

The canoes jammed, he said, his crew switched sides and "all of a sudden there were five on one side of the canoe and only myself on the other. I was pulling so hard I pulled myself right out of the canoe."

PICKED UP

He was picked up by a safety boat none the worse for his dip in the harbor.

Starkell is no newcomer to the canoe marathon world. He was captain of the Manitoba team in the Montreal-New York race in 1966 and the centennial race from Rocky Mountain House, Alta., to Montreal in 1967.

W. P. Stewart, chief of the English division, state department information services, travelled with the centennial canoe pageant through its entire route.

And he wasn't altogether happy with things. "From what some of the local centennial committees did," he said, "we pretty well had to have people there or nobody would have known about the pageant at all."

The smaller centres along the route, he said, were fine. But support in Vancouver, for example, was poor.

11-CENT RISE BREAKS TREND

Times News Services

OTTAWA — If your food bill was $13.30 in June, you had to pay $13.41 for the same items in July.

That increase of 11 cents may not sound too high, but it broke a long spell of food price stability.

One year ago in July the same food bill would have been $13.05, and in 1961, $10.

The cost of living index, which looks at more than 300 consumer goods and services, stands at one-third higher than it was 10 years ago.

★ ★ ★

Food prices jumped by a remarkable 2.2 per cent last month. For the past several months, food prices have been generally lower than a year ago, but this sunny period was ended by the sharp July increase.

All indexes are based on a monthly sampling survey across the country and include items purchased regularly.

It can be expected that fresh vegetable prices will come down as soon as Canadian crops are harvested.

Housing costs, one-third of the index, also rose considerably last month, mainly because of new house prices and higher rents. Textiles and electricity also are higher.

FIRE BLOWS UP ALONG WITH BRIDGE

HOPE (CP) — A sudden forest fire in the Fraser Canyon was getting special attention from the army Thursday.

It started in tinder dry forest when the third field squadron blew up an unused bridge.

About 125 men from Chilliwack in the Fraser Valley, 60 miles east of Vancouver, and a helicopter from FCB Comox were working under the supervision of forestry officials to contain the blaze. Extent of it was not known.

The bridge on the Old Dewdney Trunk Road was across the Coquihalla River about 36 miles east of here. The demolition job was successful.

Lillooet, Cranbrook Fire Menace Fades

VANCOUVER (CP) — Enormous tracts of British Columbia timberland are aflame today in a mounting forest fire crisis, but the siege was lifted on two fire-menaced communities hundreds of miles apart.

The potential disaster points had been Lillooet, a Fraser Canyon community of 1,800 and, to a lesser degree, the 13,000-population city of Cranbrook near the Alberta border.

On Wednesday night at Lillooet, 120 miles northeast of Vancouver, an Indian church and 12 homes were destroyed when fire roared into the west end of the village.

Thursday, fire erupted suddenly in a timbered area northwest of Cranbrook and caused short-lived concern. Driven by brisk winds, it swept over 40 acres before it was brought under control.

No homes were damaged, although it penetrated within one-half mile of the city limits.

Meanwhile, forest ranger, Superintendent Jack Cawston said at Lillooet that carelessness was the probable cause of the fire which threatened to wipe the village off the map.

"While no conclusive evidence was found," he said, "it is most probable that the fire was caused from a discarded match or cigarette butt of a careless smoker."

SHIPS FACE MONTH IN HOLDING PATTERN

Empty U.S. freighters are clogging Island ports while longshoremen continue to give priority to Canadian cargoes in the seventh week of the U.S. west coast dock strike.

Shipping officials say the American vessels may face delays of a month or more before longshoremen at Ladysmith and Cowichan Bay get around to working on them. (See story Page 15).

Meanwhile, the San Francisco local of the longshoremen's union has started a campaign which might get negotiations under way again in the dispute.

Talks on local port rules are scheduled to resume Monday between Bay area longshoremen and the Pacific Maritime Association.

5 Deputy Ministers Appointed by PM

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau today announced the appointment of five new deputy ministers, while appointing an existing deputy minister, J. H. Warren, Canadian high commissioner in London.

Mr. Warren, a native of Chatham, Ont., and now deputy minister of industry, trade and commerce, will replace Charles Ritchie, who is retiring.

Mr. Ritchie, born in Halifax and 65 next month, has been high commissioner since 1967. He is on holiday in Nova Scotia.

Mr. Warren, 50, known as Jake, has been deputy minister since 1964. He has had considerable experience in international affairs including attendance at meetings of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade on Canada's behalf.

Mr. Ritchie, a long-time career diplomat, has had many major posts in the Canadian diplomatic service including deputy undersecretary of state for external affairs, ambassador to West Germany and to the United States and representative for Canada at the United Nations.

Mr. Warren joined the external affairs department in 1945 and served in the high commissioner's office here between 1948 and 1951. He also was in the Canadian embassy at Washington between 1954 and 1957 before joining the finance department.

Mr. Warren will be replaced by J. F. Grandy, who has been deputy minister of consumer and corporate affairs since that department's inception in 1967. Mr. Grandy, 52, had previously served in the external affairs department and for a time was an assistant deputy minister of finance.

A new deputy minister of consumer and corporate affairs will be announced later, the prime minister said in a statement.

Sylvain Cloutier, now deputy minister of national revenue, becomes deputy minister of national defence, while E. B. Armstrong moves from the defence deputy ministership to replace Mr. Cloutier.

J. Douglas Love, now deputy minister of labor, is moved to the same position in the department of regional economic expansion. He replaces Tom Kent, who was recently appointed to the Cape Breton Development Corporation.

Bernard Wilson, now an assistant deputy minister of labor, moves up to replace Mr. Love.

Mr. Warren will succeed Mr. Ritchie Oct. 1, when Mr. Grandy will also move into the trade and industry department. The other appointments are effective Sept. 1.

Uvic Students Will Increase

A slight increase in the number of students at the University of Victoria can be expected this year, according to figures released Thursday by admissions officer Ron Jeffels.

Jeffels said about 5,200 students are expected to be on campus Dec. 1, the day population statistics are compiled.

Jeffels said the Uvic situation is indicative of "a general trend in universities across North America. We appear to be on a plateau right now."

Also affecting the figures, he said, is the opening this year of Camosun College, which will take first and second year students.

"There is also an economic stress factor at work," he said. Students may apply and then find it impossible to attend later, due to financial problems."

Jeffels said students these days are placing more emphasis on gaining experience before taking a university education, and often hope to gain that experience by travelling throughout the world.

"There is the tendency of students to delay their university education for a year or two. Many say their university education will become more valuable after they become experienced. It's part of the new existentialist philosophy. They say: 'I want experience before I want essence.'"

6,000 NOTICES

Jeffels said about 6,000 notices of admission and re-registration had been sent out to prospective students, of which about 5,500 are expected to register in early September.

The attrition rate, he said, is largely due to students "double-banking" — also applying at other universities to afford a better choice.

Of those 5,500, another 300 are expected to drop out before Dec. 1 for various reasons.

Jeffels said 285 graduate students are expected to attend Uvic this year, the same number as last year.

. . . IRISH CRISIS

homes of two Belfast businessmen and sprinkled gasoline over their furniture and set it on fire. A fire department spokesman said damage to both homes was extensive.

It was feared the two incidents might be the start of a campaign of personal intimidation by the IRA, who have found themselves outgunned by the British Army and are reported to be short of arms and ammunition.

Cabinet ministers, judges, industrialists and top-ranking army and police officers were rumored to be on a list for similar IRA action.

Troops and roaming gunmen in Belfast exchanged shots but no casualties were reported. Four explosions occurred in the town of Newry, near the Irish border, and a frontier roadblock at Aughnacloy, County Tyrone, was peppered by a dozen shots from the Irish side of the border.

The News Letter, a Belfast morning paper catering to Ulster's Protestant majority, expressed outrage at Lynch's remarks and said they constitute "an affront to civilized society."

Sources in London said they believe the British government will reject Lynch's proposals. Prime Minister Edward Heath is reported determined to see the 12,500 troops in Northern Ireland restore order before he considers any political action.

More than 6,000 Catholics are estimated to have fled to the Irish Republic and the Dublin government expects the number to reach at least 10,000 by Saturday.

Two thousand Protestants also have left their homes in Belfast and taken shelter in schools, churches and other public buildings.

The British Red Cross flew in supplies of blankets, diapers and pillows to Belfast. Food stocks are running dangerously low, and long lines form outside bakeries each morning to get what bread is available.

'Paper Tiger' Prowls Again

By BRIAN BUTTERS

President Nixon's planned visit to China is an example of "the famous American paper tiger" in action, ex-missionary and China expert Dr. James Endicott said today.

The chairman of the Canadian Peace Council said in an interview that Nixon's visit is "an admission of the failure of American policy in dealing with China over the years."

"It's the old John Foster Dulles policy, which recommended the non-recognition of the regime of Chiang Kai-shek and the surrounding of China with peripheral armies," he said. "It's incredible how unrealistic the American analysis of China has been."

THROUGH MOTIONS

Endicott said the move by Nixon is also motivated politically, that Nixon hopes to get re-elected by going through the motions with China.

But Endicott added that the China visit indicates some groundwork has been laid in China-U.S. relations.

It is now probable, he said, that China will be allowed into the United Nations — "they wouldn't have agreed to the visit without that" — and that the U.S. definitely plans to withdraw its trops from Vietnam.

Endicott spent 22 years in China as a missionary, and another two as an official adviser to the government of Chiang Kai-shek. But he later decided that the nationalists were wrong in their views and sided with the revolutionary element in China.

He said he is a personal friend of Chinese Premier Chou En-lai and has met and talked to Mao Tse-tung.

What kind of a man is Mao?

"He's a philosopher, and also a shrewd and capable organizer," Endicott said, "a combination which is not seen very frequently."

He said Mao has been successful in integrating the basic philosophy of Marxism into the Chinese framework of Confucius-based beliefs.

Endicott said the Russians have been "very stupid in their attitude toward China. "They're still under the impression that Mao's cultural revolution was a failure, that millions of Chinese are starving."

"Now hundreds of people are going there and seeing this is not true. They are proving the Russians wrong."

BLUNDER

"I think Trudeau panicked," he said. "They had all that was necessary in the Criminal Code to round up anyone guilty of criminal acts. The War Measures Act was unnecessary."

"They had the chance to arrest anyone they wanted and yet they didn't pick up a single member of the Mafia. So whom do they arrest? Members of our peace committee."

He said the federal government's action in the Quebec crisis was a "warning to the people of Quebec that we could compel them by force to stay in Confederation. If we did compel them, it would be disastrous."

Does Endicott consider himself a Communist? "I'm not a Communist, but a liberal Christian reformer, with roots in the Bible," he said. "I'm for social justice, especially for the poor. My sympathies lean toward Marxism but I don't call myself a Marxist."

"A Christian liberal philosophy is close to the philosophy of socialists," he said.

The Canadian Peace Council has about 200,000 sympathizers, he said, who advocate abolition of nuclear weapons and believe that a military solution is not possible for the world's problems. Any type of imperialism, such as the actions of the U.S. in Southeast Asia, is also not acceptable, he said.

Endicott is in Victoria to speak to a public meeting at 8 tonight at The Inn, 1526 Cook Street. He has several other speaking engagements in B.C. before returning to his Toronto home.

Syria Heavily Reinforcing Its Troops on Jordan Border

By The Canadian Press

Reuters news agency said reports received in Beirut, Lebanon, from Damascus said Syria is heavily reinforcing its troops along the Jordanian frontier. Columns of tanks were seen taking up positions in the border areas and other tanks, as well as troops and artillery, were on their way there.

Damascus radio said Jordanian troops opened tank and artillery fire on military and civilian positions, adding that five Jordanian tanks were destroyed.

The Jordanian government said earlier it had inflicted heavy losses on an unidentified force which had attacked Jordanian positions along the Syrian border.

Meanwhile, there were rumors in Amman that Syrian aircraft were being used in the border against Jordanians.

It was the third straight day the two armies battled. Relations started deteriorating last month when King Hussein cracked down on Palestinian Arab guerrillas in Jordan.

LACKED CONTROL

Jordan said the border clash Thursday that led Syria to break relations was caused by Syria's failure to keep a tight rein on the guerrillas.

A government spokesman, broadcasting over Amman Radio, said the fighting between Jordanian and Syrian forces Thursday was "regrettable but resulted from mounting and increased guerrilla raids across the border this week."

Syria closed its border with Jordan last month to protest King Hussein's successful crackdown on the guerrillas. On Thursday it became the third Arab country to sever relations with Jordan. Libya and Algeria did so earlier this year, and on July 19 Iraq closed its border with Jordan and barred all flights to and from Jordan over Iraqi air space.

The Jordan spokesman said his government proposed that a joint committee be formed to investigate the border incidents but Syria vetoed the plan.

Syria's official Radio Damascus said that the Jordanian tanks and armored cars opened fire Thursday on the Syrian border town of Dar'a, but the broadcast said the attack was beaten back with the loss of four Jordanian tanks. The report said a Jordanian armored car ran over a wounded Syrian soldier and killed him.

The Jordanian spokesman said the fighting began when "a force whose identity could not be determined advanced toward Jordanian positions and opened fire."

"Our forces returned fire in self-defence and damaged five attacking tanks and two artillery positions. There were no casualties."

The Jordanian reference to an unidentified force appeared to be a suggestion that units of the 8,000-man Palestinian Liberation Army, which has bases in southern Syria, were to blame for the fighting.

. . . AIR

still stood at that time, the IATA membership would face an "open rate" situation or, in effect, price warfare.

As he was making his remarks, Air Canada and BOAC were announcing their intention to seek introduction of the lower fares regardless of whether Lufthansa came into line or an open rate situation developed.

Along with U.S. carriers Trans World Airlines and Pan American Airways, the two airlines were in the vanguard of those attending the conference in their support of a cut-rate 90-day advance purchase.

Such a fare, aimed at the vacation trade, was eventually included in the fares package and was priced at less than $200 round trip between Western Europe and the Eastern North America.

It was designed to compete with the independent charter airlines which have been gobbling up much of the scheduled airlines' business in recent years.

OUTLINES INTENTIONS

In his statement, Yves Pratte, chairman of Air Canada, said:

"If . . . there is no industry agreement by Sept. 1, it is still our intention to file rates is accordance with our proposals.

By Thursday night, CP Air had joined the fray. H. Bryan Renwick, vice-president of marketing and sales, announced the airline would apply to the Canadian government for fares similar to those voted on at the IATA conference.

Meantime, Lufthansa appeared to be adamant in its opposition to the fares package following the collapse of the talks. In a statement issued from its head offices in Cologne, the airline said:

"In case it comes to an open rate situation, as looks possible, Lufthansa will offer its own tariffs which will mean an all-round simplification and reduction."

FRIDAY THE 13TH BIT PURE BUNK—OR IS IT?

LONDON (AP) — So it's Friday the 13th and nobody believes that old bunk. Except:

Kim Hughes of Steeple Ashton won a beauty contest with a week's holiday and a chance to compete for $2,400 and fame. She learned today she was disqualified after judges discovered she is only 14. The minimum age is 18.

Over in Peterport on the channel island of Guernsey, the police called in a locksmith. They had slammed the office safe shut and didn't know how to open it.

Up in Lancashire in the north, police faced a dilemma. A report came in that traffic on the express highway was being blocked by an exceedingly slow traveller on the inside slow lane. They rushed out and found the culprit to be a turtle which escaped from his master, nine-year-old Mark Williams.

Richard Bromley-Davenport went to a fancy dress ball dressed as an army intelligence officer. He got picked up for impersonating an officer and paid $48 costs for a quick hearing and a sympathetic discharge.

So it's Friday the 13th and for some it can't get over soon enough.
